Israelis stage reprisal raids on Lebanon

Associated Press

Israeli warplanes streaked across the southern Lebanese border early Wednesday, pounding Palestinian strongholds in reprisal for guerrilla rocket attacks that killed three Israelis this week. Palestinian and Lebanese officials said the Israeli attack killed 87 persons and wounded 105.

Israel's deputy defense minister, at a funeral for one of the Israeli victims, said the guerrillas "will pay the full price for their actions," that "Jewish blood is not for the taking," and vowed "never to give the murderers any rest."

Abu Jihad, a Palestinian guerrilla commander supervising rescue operations in the nearly flattened town of Azzieh, six miles north of the Israeli frontier, said, "not a single guerrillas has been killed and most of the casualties are women and children."

But a Palestinian spokesman admitted later that three members of a guerrilla antiaircraft battery "were killed while trying to repulse the raiding jets."

Israeli jets are able to cross the border with impunity because the Lebanese military virtually disintegrated during the 19-month Moslem-Christian civil war that ended a year ago, leaving only Palestinian batteries to ward off marauders. Syria's peacekeeping force, charged with preventing Moslem-Christian bloodshed, operates principally in the northern part of the country.

Associated Press Correspondent Alex Efty, reporting from Azzieh, said he saw a dozen Palestinian women wailing hysterically, pulling their hair and tearing their clothes outside the small infirmary serving nearby Burj el Shimali refugee camp.

The bodies of nine children, aged between 5 and 12, lay under bloody sheets in the infirmary's surgical ward, and one of the Palestinian women chanted: "Why have they killed our innocent babies? The wrath of God on the cursed Israeli pilots!"

It was the first Israeli air raid announced in nearly two years, and the first time the hardline government Menahem Begin has openly flexed its military muscle since taking office June 20.

Bomb craters 10 yards wide could be seen in villages and camps hit by the Israeli jets. Refugees said as many as 12 Israeli jets made repeated sorties to drop their bombs during the early morning raid.

"Thank God most of us had just left home to go to work," said Aly Yacoub, a refugee whose wife and daughter were killed when his house was wrecked along with 50 others.

"If the Israelis attacked even 15 minutes earlier the death toll would have been terrible."

A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said the raid was "a direct consequence of the irresponsible and criminal encouragement of Israel by the United States."

He said the State Department, in a statement Tuesday, failed to condemn Israel for previous attacks against civilians in southern Lebanon and confined itself to condemning Palestinian rocketing of Israel.

However, a State Department spokesman said the United States had urged both sides "to show restraint."

Passions also ran high in the Israeli town of Nahariya, where 35-year-old housewife Rivka Lupu, mother of two, was killed by a Palestinian rocket Tuesday. Israel's deputy defense minister, Mordechai Zippori, attended her funeral Wednesday and took his tough stance there.

Military sources said Israeli border troops were on heightened alert. But the military denied Beirut reports that tanks and naval vessels were involved in the reprisals.

Israel's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, told reporters in Tel Aviv the raid lasted about an hour and struck at Palestinian guerrilla command posts, training camps and field bases.

But he denied Beirut reports that Israeli jets hit the nearby refugee camps and port town of Tyre, 12 miles north of the border, and that the assault lasted three hours.

Gur said the operation served notice that Israel would not tolerate a resumption of guerrilla activity on its border with Lebanon.

Queen's guards perform

The men who play the bagpipes and drums at British royal ceremonies hardly can be accused of living in a make-believe world of pomp and circumstance.

That's the word from officials touring the United States with the band of Grenadier Guards and Pipes and Drums of the 1st Batallion Scots Guards. The musicians, decked out in traditional uniforms, performed Wednesday night at Pershing Auditorium.

The Grenadier Guards and Scots Guards are familiar to most Americans by sight, if not by name. The Grenadiers are the ones who guard Buckingham Palace, wearing red coats, black pants and those tall black bearskin caps.

The Scots Guards musicians wear plaid kilts and create haunting tunes with their bagpipes on royal occasions.

But all is not royal and noble for the Scots Guards, officials with the group said. Before starting the current 2½-month, 65-city North America tour, the 1st Batallion Scots Guards were trying to keep the peace in war-torn Northern Ireland.

"The pipers are soldiers first — and pipers second," said Tour manager William Mullaney. They may be called to serve anywhere in the United Kingdom or overseas.

Officials were reluctant to discuss the Northern Ireland conflict, in an apparent attempt to underscore the heritage behind the two groups, whose tour is in honor of the upcoming 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's coronation.

Both the Scots Guards and the Grenadier Guards are rich in tradition, being the oldest and third-oldest regiments in the British foot guard. Both groups have earned numerous battle decorations, including awards for action at Waterloo in 1815.

Becoming a household guardsman for British royalty is much like royalty itself, said Maj. H. Martin L. Smith, commanding officer of the tour.

"Officers tend to have had fathers, grandfathers and great-grandfathers who have served," Maj. Smith said. But he added a person can earn his way into the household guard by doing well at the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst. Then, if he is within the 5-foot-10 height limit (or 6-foot-2 for the queen's personal bodyguards), his application for the household division may be approved.

Then, the officer is on the verge of rubbing elbows with queens and princes.

"The senior officers get to know her (Queen Elizabeth) very well," Smith said.

The select few who are members of the queen's company — the personal bodyguards — serve as guards and pallbearers at state funerals, Smith said.

"I'll never forget Churchill's funeral," he said. "It seemed to last forever."

The casual observer may think the job of palace guard is unpleasant — particularly the wearing of the towering bearskin hats with the strap coming across the face between the lip and chin.

"Oh, no, not at all," insisted Capt. D.R. Kimberley, Grenadier music director. "It's one of the most comfortable hats you can wear."

26,334 civil servants found on welfare rolls

Washington (AP) — A government check of welfare recipients has turned up 26,334 current or recent federal workers on welfare rolls, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced Wednesday.

They made up 1.4 percent of the 1.8 million federal workers whose names were checked by computer against records of 8.2 million welfare recipients in 20 states and the District of Columbia. There are 2.7 million federal workers and 11.2 million persons in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

Califano said many federal workers with large families and low-paying jobs may be entitled to the benefits. He said he does not think federal workers are "more fraud-prone than any other group of citizens."

But he said the government must get its own house in order first as it seeks to eradicate fraud and abuse in welfare programs. He said "Project Match" will be stepped up and states will be encouraged to check their own payrolls to search for possible welfare cheaters.

He also said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is discussing with some large private companies, such as IBM and AT&T, the feasibility of combing private employers' records for welfare cheats.

Califano said he expects access to the Defense Department's payroll files on military personnel within a month to check for welfare cheats.

He defended Project Match against criticisms that the massive computer searches amount to invasions of citizens' privacy.

HEW will keep the computer tapes and printouts under tight wraps and "carefully control the delivery of material to federal and state agencies (to) insure that only senior staff in HEW and other governmental units have access to sensitive information," he said.

So far the project has cost $200,000. Califano predicted it will bring back millions of dollars to the government.

Califano said that in a pilot project in the District of Columbia, the names of 216 HEW employees were found on the welfare rolls. Of these, 84 were eligible, 32 were overpaid in benefits, and two underpaid. He said that 40 cases, or about 20 percent, were still under investigation.

Califano said that after the computer turns up "raw hits" of persons on the federal payroll and welfare rolls, the names will be sent to federal agencies to verify their employment and salary. Then the states will be asked to determine whether they were eligible for welfare.

The Russians are coming . . . for a look at life in Lincoln

Three mayors from the Soviet Union will visit Lincoln next week to reciprocate a visit made last year by a group of American mayors which included Helen Boosalis.

The tour is being conducted under the auspices of the State Department to improve relations between the two Cold War antagonists.

"We've got a busy schedule lined up for them," Mayor Boosalis said Wednesday at her regular biweekly press conference.

A highlight of the trip will be a dinner in the home of Albin Andersen, a history professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"There will be about 25 to 30 guests, who will be chosen to represent a cross-section of the community," Mrs. Boosalis said. The guest list will include representatives of state and county governments, labor and business.

The Russians will arrive at Lincoln's airport Tuesday Nov. 15 and leave the next day.

Other items on their itinerary are a tour of American Stores, a tour of the city including a look at some of the city's subsidized housing for the aged and a visit to the city's sewage treatment plant.

A stop which is expected to be especially interesting to the Russians is the UNL Tractor-Testing Laboratory on East Campus.

"They had a Soviet tractor there just last week for testing," Mrs. Boosalis said.

Members of the Russian delegation are Vladimir Alexandrovich Gusev, chairman of the Soviet Executive Committee (a post similar to mayor in the U.S.) and deputy of the Supreme Soviet of the Ukraine; Elkhan Beyukorgyl Kerimov, member of the Soviet Executive Committee of Baku; Maria Vasil-Yevna Krivenko, chaimran of Soviet Executive Committee of Kashira; and Vladimir Lesnyak, interpreter.

Old city hall's future clouded

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Its roof leaks, many of its windows are boarded and it is home only to pigeons, sparrows and rodents. Old city hall has an uncertain future.

Its chance to be a part of a civic center was all but scrapped Tuesday by the electorate as it turned down a proposed $7 million bond issue.

Hopes for its survival dimmed even further Wednesday when second thoughts surfaced among city officials about spending $182,000 for preliminary restoration on the exterior of the building.

Before any of the planned work can be done, according to George Chick of the City Urban Development Department, the plans must be approved by the state Historical Society and federal officials because the building is on the National Register of Historical Places.

The position of those officials, he said, is that the building must be restored to its original condition. This might mean, Chick said, that the roof, now covered with asphalt shingles, must be reroofed with slate.

Ornamental ironwork may be required on the exterior of the building. Four huge chimneys, which served the fireplaces (now plastered over) which heated the interior may have to be restored to their original heights.

"We're not sure how much all these things are going to end up costing," Chick said. "That $182,000, or $160,000 after architects' fees, is only a drop in the bucket.

"I could see spending $1.5 million or more to restore the building," Chick said. "The question is whether we are ever going to get that money from anywhere."

The $182,000 in federal funding which the city received this year is part of a federal program designed to combat unemployment by funding public works projects that would otherwise go unfunded. The city is also using that type of federal funding to renovate the old Cengas building to turn it into a police station.

"Before we spend the money we want to make sure the City Council knows what we're getting into," Chick said.

City Councilman Leo Scherer has already made clear his hopes for the building. He wants it razed for a parking lot. Other council members, most notably Steve Cook, would like to see it preserved as a memento of the city's past.

In the background of deliberations on the future of old city hall is the possibility that backers of the civic center may still find a way — such as a private fund drive — to make that idea a reality. The board of the Civic Center Corporation will meet next week to consider its next move.

In the meantime the city has until December 1979 to decide whether to purchase the old federal building from the Civic Center Corporation. The city already owns old city hall.

Department touchy over 'topless' link

Washington (UPI) — Justice Department lawyers admit it would be an amusing idea, but insist the department is not running a topless go-go bar in downtown Washington.

And they're getting a little touchy about news stories that imply it does — such as the one front-paged in a Washington newspaper Wednesday under the jaunty headline, "G men and G strings: All in a day's work at Justice."

Asked about that story, the Justice Department agreed to comment on two conditions: no names. And no quotes.

What the federal government has, they said, is a financial interest in the Lone Star Beef House, right near FBI headquarters, where the entertainment consists of four topless dancers cavorting on a small stage.

But the lawyers say the Justice Department doesn't operate the place.

They say it has merely filed suit to seize the $80,000 restaurant and sell it at auction to recover part of an $856,557.72 embezzlement admitted by William C. Sibert, a former Transportation Department employee and owner of the Lone Star.

Present Lone Star operators are under court orders forbidding them to dispose of any of its assets or do anything to reduce its commercial value until the suit is settled.

GM recalling full-sized cars

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. is recalling 4,900 of its new full-sized cars because defective bolts could cause the rear wheels to come off, the automaker said.

The cars involved are 1978 Chevrolets, Buicks, Oldsmobiles, Pontiacs and Cadillacs that were built during mid-October. Most are still at dealerships, GM said.

GM said it would inspect the cars' rear wheel mounting bolts and replace defective ones at no charge to owners.

Snowstorm strands hundreds

Associated Press

An early blizzard whistled out of the Rockies and dumped more than 9 inches of snow on the northern Midwest Wednesday, stranding hundreds of motorists and forcing schools and shops to close in parts of Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nebraska.

Winds gusted up to 80 miles an hour and even snowplows were immobilized in some areas.

The Iowa National Guard was mobilized to rescue hundreds of persons stranded in stalled cars and isolated homes in northwest Iowa around Sioux City, but local snowplows beat them to the job.

"We've got snowplows from Sloan to Sioux City and we're plucking these people out of their cars," Lt. Phil Heimbecker of the Woodbury County sheriff's office said Wednesday night. "There aren't many left stranded now. We're just double-checking the roads."

Volunteer snowmobilers, four-wheel-drive vehicle owners and citizen band radio operators had worked all day to free the estimated 150 to 200 motorists stranded along a 20-mile stretch of Interstate 29 south of Sioux City.

The storm was the worst on record for this time of year, the National Weather Service in Fargo, N.D., said. Temperatures have been lower, but no previously recorded storm had such high winds and deep snow.

Ten inches of snow was recorded in Minnesota where much of the western and central parts of the state were immobilized. Winds gusting up to 60 mph knocked down trees, causing some power outages.

People were advised to stay off the roads in the western parts of Minnesota. Visibility was frequently near zero and even snowplows were pulled back into their garages until conditions cleared.

It took four hours for a convoy of four-wheel drive vehicles to carry an injured man over 38 snow-blocked miles of Interstate 90 in South Dakota.

The convoy struggled over the stretch between Salem and Sioux Falls carrying a St. Paul, Minn., man whose legs were crushed when he was pinned between his van and a semi-trailer truck early Wednesday morning.

Daniel Thone, about 22, was trying to shovel snow from behind his van when he was struck by the semi in near-zero visibility. A state trooper from Salem said the convoy drivers decided to try the rescue trip when snowplows were held in garages because of ice and blowing snow.

In Sioux City, Iowa, where 5 inches of snow was whipped about by 60 mph winds, snowmobilers tried to deliver food and other supplies to people stranded in cars and trapped in isolated homes.

The storm brought stinging sheets of snow driven by winds gusting up to 80 mph. Temperatures ranged through the upper 20s and low 30s throughout much of the north-central part of the nation. And the heavy winds made it feel even colder.

John Graf, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service office in Minneapolis, said "very critical" conditions might continue through the night because of the slow-moving storm patterns.

In a telephone briefing for the state Emergency Services Division, Graf said the storm was virtually stalled and there will be "very sluggish" recovery. He said it would be at least Thursday morning before conditions ease in western Minnesota and late Thursday before the storm passes through the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, at the eastern edge of Minnesota.

Power outages were common in areas hit by the storm.

Thousands of homes in eastern North Dakota were left without power during the day. More than seven inches of heavy, wet snow fell on the state, making driving extremely difficult and forcing hundreds to leave highways in search of shelter.

"I've been here 30 years and this is the worst snow damage I've seen," said Willard Grager, manager of the rural Cass County Electric Cooperative at Kindred, N.D.

The cooperative called in its crewmen, who tried unsuccessfully to restore power to over 2,000 customers in the teeth of the blizzard.

"When the wind subsides, they'll be out again," said co-op spokesman Lawrence Moderow. "They were making very little headway and they'd worked 30 hours without any rest."

Authorities in Ottertail County, in western Minnesota, said two trucks loaded with turkeys were among vehicles stranded on Minnesota 210 and about half of the birds had frozen to death.

Schools were closed in Omaha and other areas in Nebraska, as well as in Fergus Falls, Detroit Lakes and Moorhead, Minn.

Sheriff's deputies in Detroit Lakes switched to four-wheel drive vehicles to patrol their beats, rescue stranded motorists and make emergency calls, said Sheriff Jerry Townsend.

The storm hit as cleanup operations continued in the Northeast, where as much as 9 inches of rain fell on some areas earlier in the week.

About 500 persons were allowed to return to their homes at Lodi, N.J., after 9.6 inches of rain fell in the area Monday and Tuesday, flooding the Upper Saddle River. No injuries were reported.

Volunteers brave blizzard

Sioux City, Iowa (AP) — Volunteers on snowmobiles and in four wheel drive vehicles braved blizzard conditions with near-zero visibility Wednesday, trying to succor hundreds of persons trapped in cars and homes in northwest Iowa.

"We're just like everyone else. We're stranded," said Woodbury County Deputy Sheriff Greg Logan.

He was speaking about 4 p.m., 12 hours or so into the surprise blizzard that paralyzed Sioux City and much of the surrounding area.

"At last report, we had from 150 to 200 cars stranded on Interstate 29 from Sloan to Sioux City — and that's just a 20-mile or so stretch," said sheriff's Lt. Phil Heimbecker. "We don't know what the situation might be to the north and east.

He said he feared there was "a possibility" that the blizzard could claim lives among the stranded.

The four-wheelers and snowmobiles were carrying emergency supplies of food to the stranded cars they could reach, and to some homes where citizens had run out of essentials.

"We just had a call for a special kind of baby milk from a home in Sergeant Bluff," Heimbecker said. "A local woman is volunteering the milk, and one of the other volunteers will try to get it to the home."

Heimbecker singled out for praise the Sioux City Four Wheel Drive Club, the Tri-State Snowmobil Rescue Club and the local chapter of REACT, a volunteer group that uses citizens band radios to maintain communications in emergencies.

"They're doing a heck of a job for us," he said of the volunteers. "I don't know what we'd do without them."

Crash dieters warned about liquid protein diet

(c) New York Times

Washington — The Food and Drug Administration warned crash dieters Wednesday that the use of liquid protein food supplements can be extremely dangerous, citing the deaths of 16 women in recent months who as part of a new fad had been taking the compounds to lose weight.

Dr. Donald Kennedy, the commissioner of food and drugs, said his agency was seeking to have the 35 makers of the products voluntarily label them as hazardous under certain conditions.

"The low calorie protein diets, especially the liquid protein diets, have great potential for damage," Kennedy said.

"We have every reason to believe that the liquid protein diet was at least a contributing factor or a cause of the deaths," he said, "though further study will be needed to establish a firm cause and effect relationship."

Kennedy said that if this is borne out, the FDA would use "the regulatory tools that we have to get these products off the market."

FDA officials identified three of the products under investigation as "Pro-Amino," "T-Amino Predigested Animal Liquid Protein," and "Pro-Linn."

Many of such compounds are made from the by-products of the slaughtering of cattle. They cost about $15 a quart and dieters are directed to take two tablespoonfuls four times a day in place of regular food.

The result has been many reports of dieters losing as much as 100 pounds over a period of many months or years, although some recent research studies indicated that when a dieter resumes eating regular food that his weight returns to what it was before he started the diet.

Legionnaire's disease may kill thousands every year

Atlanta (UPI) — Legionnaires' disease may take a toll of 2,000 to 6,000 American lives annually and the organism that causes it could be only one of many microbial killers yet to be unmasked by medical science, a Senate health subcommittee was told Wednesday.

"Our best guess at this time is that between one-half percent and 1½ percent of the unexplained pneumonias may be caused by this organism," said Dr. William Foege, director of the national Center for Disease Control.

Foege estimated there were three million cases of pneumonia annually caused by bacterial and viral infections and the Legionnaires' Disease bacterium may be responsible for 15,000 to 45,000 cases and 2,000 to 6,000 deaths.

Foege stressed, however, the estimate was based on only two "Small studies" and it was given with "a great deal of hesitation."

The subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was at the CDC for a hearing on the health agency's $1.5 million investigation of the Legionnaires' disease. The disease was named after a Philadelphia American Legion convention outbreak in July 1976 that claimed 29 lives.

Although Foege said scientists have not discovered where the organism lives or exactly how it is transmitted, he indicated several times that soil excavations and air conditioning systems were likely suspects.

Byrne, Dalton share special joy

United Press International

Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey and Republican Governor-elect John Dalton of Virginia are ideological poles apart, but Wednesday they shared the special joy of hard-earned political victory.

Byrne, all but abandoned by the pundits and many politicians of his own party, came back from an early poll deficit of 20 points to win a second term by soundly beating Republican state Sen. Raymond Bateman in Tuesday's balloting.

The outcome was vindication of Byrne's sponsorship of New Jersey's first-ever income tax and a small feather in the cap of President Carter, who campaigned personally for the Democrats in both states that elected governors this year.

Dalton, pitted against flamboyant Democrat Henry Howell whose name has been before the voters almost constantly in the last decade, overcame an early "recognition gap" to beat Howell and retain the Virginia governorship for the GOP.

Dalton's victory sealed the GOP stamp on once solidly Democratic Virginia and reduced Carter's 1977 campaign batting average to .500.

The Virginia outcome also may have cleared the ladder for a new Democratic generation led by Charles Robb, Lyndon Johnson's son-in-law. Robb was elected leiutenant governor, the only Democrat to win statewide office.

In New York City, Rep. Edward Koch also savored a successful journey out of the political wilderness. The five-term congressman was just one of the faces in the crowd when he entered the Democratic mayoral primary. But he beat the field, which included incumbent Abraham Beame, former Rep. Bella Abzug and Secretary of State Mario Cuomo, who had Gov. Hugh Carey's blessing.

Tuesday, Koch easily defeated Cuomo and two others to become mayor-elect of the nation's largest and most problem-ridden city.

Byrne, who won his first term by projecting the image of a tough judge in a corruption-scarred state, was exultant: "New Jersey is not morally respectable and morally ready to tackle the remaining problems which face this state. I think the tax problem is behind us."

Dalton, a life-loing Republican who will succeed a political convert, Gov. Mills Godwin, made no bones about the direction of his administration: "I will see to it that the conservative type of government we've had in Virginia for the last 20 or 30 years — in my lifetime — will be continued."

And Koch, amid the celebrations of his victory, made clear he was aware of the herculean task ahead of him: "While the band may be playing 'Happy Days Are Here Again,' we cannot lose sight of the tremendous challenge that awaits us . . . the job of turning New York City around will not be easy."

Other mayoral results:

Pittsburgh: Acting Mayor Richard Caliguiri, running as an independent, whipped the Democratic organization candidate to win a full term in his own right.

Detroit: Mayor Coleman young beat another black candidate to win his second term.

Cleveland: Dennis Kucinich, a 31-year-old maverick Democrat, will be the nation's youngest big city mayor succeeding Republican Ralph Perk, a casualty of an earlier primary.

Minneapolis: Al Hofstede ousted Mayor Charles Stenvig in the rubber match of a political rivalry dating back to 1969.

Houston: Former District Attorney Frank Briscoe and homebuilder Jim McConn will run off Nov. 22 for the post held by Retiring Mayor Fred Hofheinz.

Bess Myerson won't accept any post from Koch

New York (UPI) — Former Miss America Bess Myerson, whose vigorous campaigning helped elect Edward Koch, said Wednesday she will not accept any formal post in the administration of the mayor-elect.

She also said she has no plans to marry Koch, although the two have been linked romantically since the Democratic congressman began his mayoral campaign nine months ago. New Yorkers became accustomed to seeing the pair campaigning together, often holding hands as they walked through the crowds.

"I must have my privacy again," said Miss Myerson. "I want to be free. I don't want to be devoured by the administration of an office again."

Miss Myerson was referring to the four years she served as New York's commissioner of consumer affairs, appointed by former Mayor John V. Lindsay.

"I will do what Ed asks me to do," said Miss Myerson. "He would like for me to have a title as special adviser to the mayor.

"When he calls on me to talk to say, a group of bankers, interested in investing in this city, I'll do it. I've been thinking about grace mansion (the official residence of the mayor). I told Ed we could have the world's great personalities come there . . . everyone comes through New York. It's no more than a 20-minute taxi ride before they take off for Washington."

Miss Myerson already is planning the hostess role.

Pittsburgh voters favor jobs over clean air

Associated Press

Pittsburgh voters decided that jobs are more important than clean air; residents of Toledo, Ohio, passed a tax increase that will reopen the city's schools and voters in north Florida still don't want to see liquor sold in their towns.

Hundreds of constitutional questions and referendums were before voters across the country in Tuesday's elections. Some of them gave voters a chance to speak their minds on national issues. Others settled local disputes.

The issues ranged from methods of animal trapping to methods of producing energy, from drinking to pornography, from the term of office of a governor to bond issues.

Pittsburgh area voters, concerned about recent layoffs in the steel industry, voted by a 2-1 margin to ask their officeholders to fight for jobs by seeking changes in existing pollution control laws.

"It was the first time that anyone in this country had asked the little people what they thought about the environmental laws being passed in Washington," said an Allegheny County commissioner who favored the resolution. "And I think it showed they have a gut feeling that you have to try to preserve existing laws when you try to preserve the environment."

Opponents said the vote could slow down environmental improvements without adding to the 60,000 steel-related jobs in the county.

Here are the highlights of other referendums or constitutional questions considered by the voters on Tuesday:

OHIO — A constitutional amendment that would have banned the use of leghold traps lost by 2-1. Animal humane societies had favored the question, but hunters and trappers waged a heavy campaign against it. Ohio also did away with its election-day registration law.

Toledo voters approved an increase in the amount they pay in property taxes to support education. Voters had knocked down higher taxes the last four times they had the chance — forcing city schools to close for a time both this year and last for lack of funds.

OREGON — A bond issue that would have authorized the state to fund development of non-nuclear sources of energy such as the sun, the wind and the ocean was voted down.

FLORIDA — The voters of Santa Rosa County voted to ban liquor, just as they did in 1966 and 1972. Meanwhile, Miami voters may get the chance to have a beer at the Orange Bowl. With absentee ballots still to be counted, a straw vote on beer sales met with approval by a margin of two votes. Mayor Maurice Ferre said he would go ahead and start the legal process necessary to sell beer at football games.

WASHINGTON — Within a month a new court system will be in effect that will make it easier for people to oust porno shops and movie theaters from their neigborhoods. Terming pornography a "moral nuisance," the referendum creates a civil court system for closing shops and theaters. Opponents had called the measure "pure censorship."

NORTH CAROLINA — A consitutional amendment was passed that changes state law to allow the governor and lieutenant governor to succeed themselves.

Sullivan killed in hunting accident

William C. Sullivan, the FBI wire tap boss forced out of his assistant director's job because he questioned J. Edgar Hoover, was shot and killed Wednesday in a deer hunting accident near his retirement home.

Officials said the son of a state police officer allegedly shot the former No. 3 man at the FBI in the neck or shoulder about a quarter of an hour before sunrise after mistaking him for a deer.

They said it was not known what charges, if any, would be filed against Robert Daniels, in his 20s.

She'd vote to 'hang 'em all'

Claire P. Boutin didn't mince words in telling the Muscogee County, Ga., sheriff she was tired of repeated letters summoning her for jury duty.

"See if you can get the knothead of a clerk to put a notation alongside my name 'old as Methuselah,'" she wrote Sheriff Jack Rutledge. "I am 77 years old and if you want me to fall asleep in the jury box, I'll come.

"If I did, I'd vote to hang 'em all."

Superior Court Judge John Land said Mrs. Boutin would be excused from further jury service.

Shirley Jones to wed producer

Shirley Jones and Marty Ingels, a commercial producer, will be married Sunday in a private ceremony, the couple announced Wednesday.

Susan Ford to be on TV show

Susan Ford, like her father, Gerald, and mother, Betty, who have signed contracts for NBC-TV specials, also has landed a TV job.

The daughter of the former president will become a regular on the Jim Nabors syndicated variety show, which debuts in January.

"Susan's charm and grace will help everyone feel right at home with us," Nabors said of Miss Ford.

Berenson gives birth to girl

Actress Marisa Berenson, who appeared in the movies "Barry Lyndon" and "Cabaret," has given birth to a girl named Starlite Melody, the family has announced.

It was the first child for Miss Berenson and her husband, industrialist James Randall, who were married last November.

Louise Hicks loses in Boston

Boston (AP) — Louise Day Hicks, the once-powerful leader of the city's anti-busing movement, was narrowly defeated Tuesday in her bid for re-election to the City Council.

Mrs. Hicks, who in past elections was often Boston's top vote-getter, lost by 126 votes in unofficial returns to state Rep. Raymond Flynn, another anti-busing leader. Also defeated was John Kerrigan, another politician who had built his career on opposition to court-ordered busing for school integration.

Mrs. Hicks served one term in Congres in 1970 and twice ran unsuccessfully against Mayor Kevin H. White.

Kerrigan lost his seat on the nine-member City Council to Rosemarie Sansone, a political newcomer.

Mrs. Hicks lives in South Boston, center of white opposition to busing, and often led demonstrations against the integration program.

Lincoln voters selective about bond proposals

The overwhelming approval given Lincoln's $6.8 million storm sewer bond issue speaks well of the city's voters.

Many who voted in favor of the bond issue probably won't directly benefit from the improvements to be financed by it. But those people recognized the need of Lincolnites who have been victims of inadequate storm sewers and the need to take a bigger bite out of the $20-$30 million backlog of storm sewer projects.

The "Concerned Neighbors" pitch struck a responsive chord.

We were concerned that the storm sewer bond issue had been put on the ballot too hastily, that there was not enough time to develop a favorable attitude toward the issue among city voters. Happily, that concern proved groundless. It is possible we underestimated the fairness with which Lincoln voters will respond when a priority need is demonstrated.

The overwhelming vote against the $7 million Civic Center bond issue shows, on the other hand, that Lincoln voters can be discriminating. We suspect that many voters judged the center on the priority scale and decided it just didn't stack up — against the storm sewer bonds or other city needs. There probably was, too, some irritation on the part of voters that Civic Center backers came back for a vote so soon after the narrow defeat last spring. Voters were saying, in effect, "don't hand us that turkey again."

As with the storm sewer bonds, we supported the Civic Center issue — for a number of reasons, especially the role that project would play in promoting further downtown redevelopment.

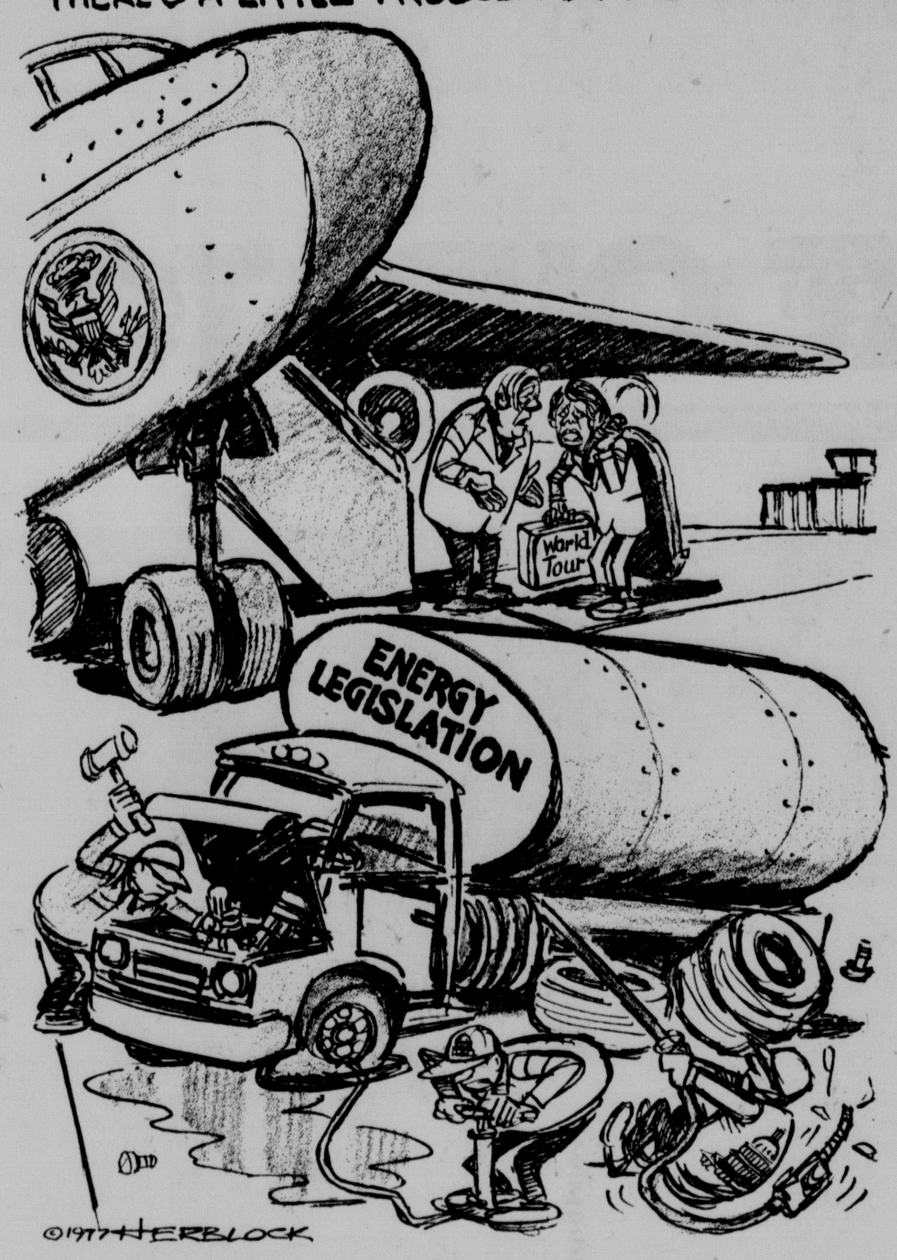
Many voters undoubtedly mentally stripped away most of the arguments supporting the center until all that was left was the picture of another big tax bite to pay for another stage for the arts.

So substantial was the margin of defeat for the Civic Center bonds that it spared backers the agony of thinking about the "if onlys." They ran a classic campaign: identifying key precincts where they thought they could rally support, mass mailings, canvassing, telephone banks, the works. They got out the vote, all right — overwhelmingly negative, thus eliminating the opportunity to punish one another with the thought that if only they had done it differently, the issue would have squeaked through. As one supporter said after the election, "We didn't get outcoached, we just got whipped."

The Civic Center was a sound proposal in our book.

But the people didn't think so. As Council Chairman Dick Baker said, they spoke, "loud and clear."

"THERE'S A LITTLE PROBLEM ON THE RUNWAY"



Falling on deaf ears

President Carter went to the people again Tuesday to appeal for support of his energy program. The program is the center of a titanic struggle between producing interests which want more money to pull additional amounts of finite resources from the earth and those who believe, with the President, that conservation is the better way to reduce our dependence on foreign energy sources.

As usual, the President presented his case in an understated manner which lacked the sense of urgency the words he uses imply.

Carter's infrequent departures from this style — as in his attack on the oil and gas industry in which he said its demand for production incentives would amount to the "biggest rip-off in history" — seem, however, to be similarly ineffective.

The truth of the matter, is that even such charismatic figures as Franklin Roosevelt or John Kennedy would have had a hard time convincing Americans that the nation is in clear and present danger from profligate energy consumption. Nor would it be highly likely that past masters of executive dominance of the legislature would have any greater degree of success in getting the Senate to go along with the likes of Carter's energy package.

In the long run, the American public will learn that Carter is not crying wolf.

But it will take economic collapse or another OPEC oil embargo or a system of allocation or rationing to jar the public back to reality.

In the meanwhile, the battle between profiteers and conservationists goes on relatively unnoticed.

It is hoped that Carter will stick by his pledge to veto any legislation which he thinks evades his standards of fairness and efficacy.

Sen. Bob Dole, the Kansas Republican, said Wednesday that Carter is so hungry for the appearances of a legislative triumph that he would sign any bill which mentions the word "energy" anywhere among its provisions.

We hope that's not the case.

So, where's the remorse?

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — Before former CIA Director Richard Helms goes about wearing his conviction for intentionally misleading a Senate committee like, as his lawyer put it, "a badge of honor," a final word must be said about this plea-bargaining business that enables big shots to cop a nolo contendere plea and waltz out into society not only unshackled but unrepentant.

As the world now knows, Helms hired himself a smart lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, and after a deal with the Justice Department, got off scot-free — unless you consider a $2,000 fine and a two-year suspended sentence cruel and unusual punishment. On being sprung, he quoth: "I don't feel disgraced at all. I think if I had done anything else, I would have been disgraced." Could G. Gordon Liddy have put it better?

Plea-bargaining is a long-time vehicle for unclogging court dockets and making special deals for special people. But it probably didn't hit widespread public consciousness until Oct. 10, 1973, when another VIP named Spiro Agnew slipped into a Baltimore courtroom and earned his freedom by similarly pleading no-contest to a wrist-slapping, income-tax evasion misdemeanor. The prosecutors had much more on him, including accepting cash not only as governor of Maryland but also as vice president, once in an office in the basement of the White House.

In that case the judge, Walter E. Hoffman, accepted the plea after having met in secret in an Alexandria motel with then Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen, the federal prosecutors and Agnew's lawyers. The judge insisted that he could not guarantee in advance that he would accept the plea, but that was window dressing. The deal was cut and Agnew left the courtroom free as a bird, with a mere $10,000 fine and a suspended three-year sentence.

The widespread expectation was that Agnew, thus chastised, would slink off to reside in the private hell of his own remorse. But those of us who so expected did not know our man. In short order, he was on television declaring his innocence and showing up at the Capital Centre in suburban Maryland where he was, incredibly, roundly applauded. Next we were treated to Agnew globe-trotting on mysterious business that took him to many old Arab friends he had met as veep. He even wrote a lucrative (but poor) novel about a vice president, which he proceeded to promote on the talk-show circuit. This was remorse?

It has been more of the same ever since, and you have to wonder whether Helms saw the photo in the newspapers a day or so ago of Agnew in Bangkok, smilingly hoisting a libation with a former Thai foreign minister. If so, he has been able to take heart, knowing that life can go on after a nolo plea, even if you're a public figure with, as in Helms' case, a fat government pension undisturbed by your conviction.

In fairness to Helms, it must be said emphatically that he cannot possibly be in the same chutzpah league as Agnew. Nor was his crime — denying to senators that the CIA had spent more than $8 million of U.S. taxpayers' money to put the blocks politically to President Salvador Allende of Chile — quite the same as being personally on the take from Maryland contractors.

But to the average guy who can't even get a parking ticket fixed, the Helms case looks like more business-as-usual for the big shots, who Jimmy Carter, in accepting the Democratic nomination last year, promised would no longer get special treatment. In defending his actions, Helms apparently never thought he had any alternative to lying in open hearing, such as asking to testify in private or simply declining to respond — on the same grounds of national security that he later invoked to justify his untruthful testimony.

The parallel between the treatment of Helms and former Attorney General Richard Kleindienst for similarly lying to a Senate committee has been widely noted. In that case, too, a judge played ball on plea-bargaining. It is undeniably true that plea-bargaining in its less dramatic invocations may serve the public's cause by saving money and bringing a swift resolution to cases that otherwise would languish in the court's backlog. But this business of the government using it to get the prominent off the hook as painlessly as possible may be doing more to maintain public cynicism about equal justice than even the pardon of Richard Nixon. When will some hard-nosed man or woman in a black robe strike one for the little guy by simply refusing to be a party to the deal?

The answer to that one, lamentably, probably is: when Ted Agnew — and Dick Helms — say they're sorry.

Kennedy answers

Washington — Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., bolstered by $9,000 in campaign contributions last year from doctors and medical groups, is leading the charge against national health insurance.

With his lance aimed at Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., Bauman galloped into the arena and stirred up a great cloud of dust. But after the dust had cleared, the quixotic Bauman sat, unhorsed, upon the ground.

He attacked Kennedy in a fund-raising letter emblazoned with his congressional letterhead. "Ted Kennedy is pushing a socialized medicine bill to pay for free abortions for anyone who wants one," charged Bauman. Kennedy called the letter "an outright misrepresentation of the facts."

Bauman claimed that, under Kennedy's bill, "The federal government will decide what medical care you need." Kennedy said the doctors would continue to make all medical decisions for their patients.

Bauman alleged that "your confidential medical records can be read by any bureaucratic snoop in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare." Kennedy responded that the bill has the same strict privacy safeguards that are now in effect.

Bauman claimed that "welfare chiselers" would get "free abortions," "free VD clinics," and "free medical care even when they don't need it." Kennedy noted the bill protects patients from unnecessary surgery.

Bauman warned that health insurance would precipitate "tax increases over $40 billion, unless Mr. Kennedy is willing to plunge the country into debt." Kennedy said it would cost only half that much, with general revenues covering the rest of the cost.

The recipients of Bauman's letter can stop this nightmare, he explained, by sending contributions, preferrably in $100 bills, to his organization. The mailing is being financed by the Congress of County Medical Societies, which represents 80,000 doctors who abhor any federal interference in the sacred affairs of physicians.

The Food and Drug Administration has come under fire for trying to allow manufacturers to use cheaper substitutes in ice-cream. But now the agency is doing the same thing for nearly 100 other foods, including yogurt, skim milk, mayonnaise, salad dressing, and mozzarella cheese.

The FDA says it has the legal authority to set food standards, and that is will result in lower prices with no drop in nutritional quality.

Panama — and policy elsewhere

C. L. Sulzberger

Washington — A great complaint about the previous Republican administration was that — prior to its utter disintegration during the Watergate scandal — U.S. foreign policy had been virtually paralyzed by the Vietnam war in every area outside Southeast Asia.

The question now asked abroad is this: has American diplomacy become so bogged down by arguments over Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaty that it is becoming ineffective?

Secretary of State Vance categorically denies that there is any justification for such concern. He says worries about the Canal treaty's fate are of course considerable; yet they are not mirrored in any delay regarding high priority diplomatic issues — like SALT negotiations, the Middle East or southern Africa.

There are naturally certain long-term discussions which are, have been and will be taking place and on whose ultimate solution nobody can guess with accuracy. Thus, it is impossible to foresee how much time it will require before a final framework for full relations with People's China is arranged. But, says Vance, no artificial delays have been injected by the Panama problem.

As an example of the kind of diplomatic highway that might appear blocked — or detoured — because of the Canal argument, one might conjecture that the nasty Greco-Turkish crisis (directly linked to Cyprus) could be affected. This does not, however, seem to be the case. The immediate reason to stall on this perplexing matter is the Greek election of November 20 when Prime Minister Caramanlis hopes to confirm his parliamentary majority.

It would be foolish for any party to the argument — or any friend of the participants — to make even the gentlest gesture until after that vote. However, Clark Clifford, President Carter's special envoy on this affair, talks of making a new trip to the Aegean region later. Whether he actually does (because he has recently been unwell), Washington remains extremely concerned about the area. It is in close consultation with certain American allies to see if they can't share part of the negotiating burden that seeks to compose NATO's nastiest confrontation.

A similar effort to secure allied cooperation is being displayed with reference to southern Africa. Here again the shadow of Panama seems — at least so far — to have had no slowing up effect. Both Western nations and Western private business concerns (European and American) have cooperated and appear to be co-operating even more to apply pressures on Prime Minister John Vorster to equalize racial opportunities in South Africa.

And certainly the problem of ratifying the Canal treaty — delicate and dangerous as it is — has had no effect on the pace or substance of nuclear negotiations, either SALT talks with the Soviet Union or discussions of peaceful atomic problems affecting U.S. friends. The latter category includes West German relations with Brazil and French relations with Pakistan on reactors.

It was strikingly confirmed that Soviet-American bilateral exchanges on nuclear issues are moving quietly but perceptibly ahead when Brezhnev signalled willingness to call a moratorium on all tests, including those for peaceful purposes.

Likewise, as reported in a previous column, one urgent reason for President Carter's four-continent journey abroad — now deferred — is to discuss with Brazil that country's reactor contract with West Germany and to discuss with India the complex relationship of that country's own nuclear program with the deal between its rival, Pakistan, and France.

Already — though this has not yet been advertised — U.S. diplomacy has made considerable advances on this general subject with both Bonn and Paris. Neither capital, despite our urging, has agreed to call off existing sales contracts with Brasilia and Islamabad, respectively. Nevertheless, both have given Washington assurances that in the future they will transfer abroad neither sensitive technologies nor sensitive equipment.

Finally, the United States is forging ahead slowly on preliminary talks with the Soviet Union about another SALT accord, despite often savage and sometimes ill-informed arguments in this city about its implications.

What the administration ultimately seeks is a halt to the present rate of spending in the arms race, a reduction in the number of the deadliest weapons and a limitation in qualitative improvement of such weapons. The goal is approximate arms parity between the two super-powers and a consequent decrease in the theoretical likelihood of nuclear war.

Thus according to Vance, though the Panama Canal ratification prospects seem at least temporarily blocked in the Senate, the progress of major diplomacy in other fields is not.

It does get hot

Lincoln, Neb.

As one of those who attended last Monday night's City Council meeting as well as numerous other public meetings, I take exception to Joe Hampton's characterization of the meeting which appeared in last Saturday's papers. There were no demonstrations and there were no efforts to harass or embarras Mr. Hampton. Certainly there was emotion at times because human rights is an emotional issue, but the audience showed no more emotion than the council members did, and definitely showed less emotion than Mr. Hampton's outburst after the meeting.

Contrary to what some may feel, the City Council is not a private board of directors. It is a public body that should be open to the public. If Mr. Hampton does not enjoy hearing citizens disagree with his views, he should not react by insulting citizens and other members of the council. Perhaps he should follow the sage advice of Harry Truman and remove himself from the political kitchen.

STEVE FOWLER

How it is Unadilla, Neb.

That dude from Elmwood who pretends to be a retired farmer needs someone with the courage to tell it like it is.

Because of government restrictions and policies of organized labor, farming is not able to operate at a profit. Due to government restrictions, farmers have been run out of the poultry and milk business here, too.

The higher prices for farm machinery are due to government approval of higher wages set and demanded by organized labor. The farmer is in direct competition with imported meat and other food through such free trade ports as Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, which is permitted by the U.S. government.

The grain embargo and strikes by dock workers and longshoremen at harvest cause farm prices to fall. This is being sanctioned by our government. The reason for the dock strikes is to permit sales of American grain to be loaded on American ships which charge more than foreign vessels. This causes a serious pile-up in transportation and now after three weeks, we find over 2,000 barges and thousands of freight cars are immobilized at the ports.

This delay causes grain prices to sag and eventually means that lower farm prices are causing farmers to subsidize loading on American vessels to meet foreign competition.

While this situation exists, our political leaders have made the U.S. the largest exporter of war material to every country regardless of whether it be friend or foe. The gift of U.S. arms to all countries has armed every country to a point where they are better armed for war than at any other time in history.

U.S. farmers are being used to produce cheap food for the consumer while in direct competition with increasing food imports through free trade zones who pay no U.S. taxes.

We also contribute millions in welfare and food stamps to Puerto Rico as part of our foreign aid policy.

Of the recent $6.3 billion in the farm program, some $3.5 billion is to be used for an increase in food stamps covering three million new recipients for four more years.

The government loans made to farmers must be paid and such loans only defer the bankrupt proceedings of the farmers. So while farmers are paying high interest rates of from 9% to 12% to pay their taxes, our government is making arms loans to nations at rates as low as 2½%.

The Carter administration is increasing foreign aid money and also is funneling it through international organizations over which we have no control.

Carter advocates a 5% increase in lending by the World Bank, and an 11% increase next year. The U.S. puts up 32% of the funds while oil-rich Saudi Arabia puts up only 3% but requires that 90% of that be spent in Arab territory.

Average salaries of the 2,000 staffers of the World Bank runs about $50,000 each, plus many fringe benefits and luxury living, all tax-exempt.

It is this Watergate atmosphere of influence peddling, bribery and immoral behavior in Washington that is bringing about a moral and economic recession in our country.

During his election, Mr. Carter promised a cut in warmongering but increased interference in foreign affairs recalls the Bible prophecy of the Anti-Christ who leads nations into combat at Armageddon.

Challenge needed

Lincoln, Neb.

Considering all the current concern about low scoring of students on standardized tests, I cannot understand why the Lincoln public schools do not place more emphasis on activities that are academic in nature. Recently the East High forensics department requested permission for their students to attend the "Little Nationals" speech and debate tournament in Minneapolis. These students have done well in competition here in Nebraska and need the challenge of stiffer competition. Their principal approved this activity and the students worked to raise the money to go. However, when the request was made to the Activities Council of the Lincoln public schools, the request was turned down.

It is my understanding that permission must be obtained from the Activities Council for any school-related trip which is more than 250 miles. This is a good guideline. However, judgment concerning these trips should be made fairly. The athletic teams are allowed to go to Scottsbluff and their way is paid. The distance to Scottsbluff is approximately the same as to Minneapolis. The swim team at East has been going on a ski trip each year and this is not even for a school-related learning activity. The only reason I was given by the superintendent's office for not allowing this activity was that last year students qualified for the national speech and debate contest and there was no money available to send them. The students have already raised the money for this trip so that is not a valid reason for denying permission.

Students who do well in forensics spend hours and hours in research and practice and should receive some reward and encouragement. No pep club cheers for them. Their victories are scarcely noticed. If we wish to encourage academic excellence, surely the school should allow experiences which will promote it.

Fifty-two million dollars overtaxed. That is money the Nebraska taxpayer will never see again, collected since July 1, 1977. That is about $100 each on the average among 500,000 families.

The Board of Equalization could have called a special meeting and put the sales tax back to three per cent and the income tax back to 14% of the federal tax. But they didn't. Now that money is forever gone from our pockets. The amount will be even greater by Jan. 1, 1978.

The devil and deceit

After reading about Richard Helms parading his lying as a badge — and The Star's article on people who follow Jesus — I am not ashamed to admit to being a Christian and follower of Jesus.

The "Jesus freak" headline only emphasizes to me the ability of the press to distort. It says to me: "Be careful," or "The devil is full of deceit."

Much of the description printed sounded unbelievable as to uncharitableness and dealings in the business community. However, before swallowing all of this whole, I would like to know more about the author, Dwayne Walls of Saturday Review, who he is and what his relation to Christ is. After I know this, it will enable me to make a better evaluation of the "news item."

Poll shows president has negative job rating

Harris Poll

By Louis Harris

The steady decline in President Carter's job ratings raises the question of just what political base he has left from which to operate effectively.

Here is the pattern of Carter strengths and weaknesses, drawn from the latest Harris Survey of 1,533 adults nationwide. This poll showed the president with an overall 50-48 percent negative job rating:

— Regionally, the only area where Carter can find encouragement is in his native South, where he has a 55-44 percent positive standing. He is in the deepest trouble in the East, where he has a 55-44 percent negative rating. Fifty-one percent majorities also give him negative marks in the Midwest and the West.

The support which the South offers Jimmy Carter has little to do with ideology. It is essentially personal and emotional. To most Southerners, the President is one of their own, a politician who led the region back into the mainstream of American politics. The hold that he has in the South is much like the one President Kennedy had on Catholics. They tended to back him even if they didn't approve of many of his policies.

— As for different age groups, Carter's appeal is clearly to young people under 30, from whom he receives a 54-45 percent positive rating. By contrast, he is in trouble among people 50 and over, who give him a 57-42 percent negative score. This represents a complete turnaround from his July rating, when older people gave him 59-34 percent positive marks.

One of the reasons Carter's rating has slipped among older people is their continuing worry about inflation. With tax rises on energy and on Social Security in the offing, older people feel the burden on an economic squeeze more than other age groups.

— Nationwide, men give the president a 54-45 percent negative rating, while women tend to approve of the job he is doing with a 52-47 percent positive score.

Women have responded to Carter's advocacy of the Equal Rights Amendment, to his stand on human rights, and to his efforts to achieve peace around the world and in the Middle East. By contrast, men tend to judge him more severely on how he is handling such issues as the economy, energy and relations with Congress.

— From the viewpoint of political philosophy, Carter receives his lowest marks from conservatives, who give him a negative rating of 57-42 percent. By contrast, liberals come up with a strong 58-40 percent positive vote. Middle-of-the-road people split the difference, with a 50-49 percent negative rating.

The negative judgment of conservatives reflects concern over such issues as the Panama Canal treaties, Carter's recent attack on the oil industry, and his apparent inability to take strong hold on federal waste and spending.

— Among key religious and ethnic groups, the president does not do as well as Democratic presidents usually do. Among Catholics, he receives a 51-48 percent negative rating, and among Jews, he comes up with a 65-34 percent negative standing. He does somewhat better among blacks, with a 56-42 percent positive mark. But it must be pointed out that this is not a strong showing for a group that went 86-14 percent for him in last year's election.

As one examines this new pattern of Carter support and opposition in the country, it is evident that, with a few notable exceptions, little has changed since the election last year. Then, he lost the regions outside the South, but carried his home region handsomely. He did better among younger than older voters. He had more appeal for women than men. He won the liberal vote overwhelmingly, but lost the conservative vote. He did not pull strongly in traditional Democratic strongholds with religious minorities.

Yet, this was enough for him to win the presidency, and if he guards this base well, it could be anough to give him the edge necessary to govern successfully.

Judy Carter to be pro-ERA answer to Schlafly

(c) New York Times

Washington — Judy Carter, the president's daughter-in-law, who likes to describe herself as "a housewife from Calhoun, Georgia," has emerged as one of the leading spokesmen for the stalled Equal Rights Amendment.

The 27-year-old, blue-eyed, auburn-haired Mrs. Carter, who resembles a young Myrna Loy, is on the verge of becoming the pro-ERA forces' answer to Phyllis Schlafly, the Alton, Ill., housewife who leads the well-organized opposition group, Stop E.R.A.

"It wasn't planned; it just happened," Mrs. Carter said the other day during an interview in the White House, where she was staying with her 2-year-old son, Jason James, while making two Washington appearances on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment. She is married to President and Mrs. Carter's oldest son, Jack.

"The president didn't appoint me to any official capacity," she added. "I'm not salaried. Whenever I make an appearance, ERAmerica or the state coalition pays my way. And when I have to hire a babysitter or park at an airport, I pay for it myself."

Mrs. Carter, who was a member of a champion debate team at Calhoun High School, said she first became interested in the ERA struggle last year when she visited several states where the legislatures were about to vote on ratifying the amendment.

"I found one of the biggest problems was that the White House was not really getting the kind of information it could use effectively to support the amendment," she said. "We didn't do our homework, we didn't know what to do. Jimmy would make calls at the last minute trying to sway some legislator, and then the buy would publicly announce, 'Ha, ha, the president didn't make me change my vote.' "

In her role as an unofficial White House fact-finder and trouble-shooter, Mrs. Carter has made speeches and lobbied legislators in Nevada, where she encountered picket signs that read, "Go Home, Mrs. Carter, You're Wasting the Taxpayers' Money" as well as in Florida, Illinois and Indiana.

She also wrote an article, "Why Nice Women Should Speak Out for ERA," for the October issue of Redbook, of which she is a contributing editor.

"I've decided that lobbying is the whole ball game," she said, in her soft Southern drawl. "Most legislators have as little information about the ERA as most constituents. So we are absolutely dependent on organized, direct lobbying, which is the only way it's going to pass. The opponents, though only a tiny minority, have been much better organized."

Mrs. Carter said she had had several offers to debate Mrs. Schlafly, but so far had turned them down, on the ground that "such a debate would give her credibility and a forum for her crazy beliefs."

"But at the same time, it's really a challenging thought," she added. "I have been in a debate or two in my time, too, and I think Phyllis would have a hard time proving I'm a lesbian lover, antiman, antimother and antihomemaker."

Intruder lucky the sleeper couldn't pursue him

Waterloo, Iowa (UPI) — An afternoon intruder at a city home was lucky Charles Simpson didn't have his clothes on.

Simpson, 29, a night-shift worker, was sleeping when he was awakened by a noise.

"I grabbed a gun that I keep near the bed. The bedroom door flew open and some guy stood there.

"He gave some vague excuse about looking for an apartment," he said.

Simpson ordered the man to freeze but the man ran and Simpson fired three shots after him "but he got away."

The pursuit ended there because Simpson always sleeps in the nude "and I hadn't taken the time to put on any clothes."

Mary Reppard has a big smile for Denver.

102-year-old takes her first plane trip

Milwaukee (UPI) — Mary Reppard was 28 when the Wright brothers made their historic flight.

She had planned to take her first airplane ride two years ago on her 100th birthday but socked in by illness. Wednesday, thanks to church friends and airline employees, she got her chance to take off.

"I'm taking it very calmly," Mrs. Reppard said while seated in the boarding area awaiting her roundtrip Milwaukee-Denver flight.

"I decided to fly just for a change, I guess," she said, her hands folded on her blue and white print dress. "I wanted to do something different."

Although she spoke just above a whisper from her wheelchair, she could have passed for 70. The only time she stopped smiling was when the television lights were turned on, forcing her to squint.

Before she boarded, pilot Joe Conover pinned gold wings on her dress opposite an orchid she was wearing.

Mrs. Reppard had told her friends at the Methodist Manor nursing home that she wanted to go west to see the mountains. Members of Cudahy Methodist Church and employees of United Airlines in Milwaukee chipped in to buy her ticket.

"We've boarded champagne for everyone in coach," said Sue Shaffer, United's Milwaukee manager. "She doesn't drink, but she said she'll do the champagne toast anyway."

Carmen is 29, not 40

Las Vegas, Nev. (AP) — Taking the cue from her little sister with the big name, Carmen Martinez Molina has convinced a federal judge that she is 11 years younger than her passport says.

The little sister is the flamboyant entertainer Charo, and last week U.S. District Judge Roger Foley signed an order dropping 10 years from Charo's age.

Charo, who recently closed her first headliner engagement on the famed "Strip," presented affadavits from her parents which stated that the age on her passport was wrong, and that she was born in 1951, not 1941.

Foley signed an order earlier this week chopping 11 years off of Carmen's age, for the same reason he ruled in Charo's favor.

Carmen is now 29, not 40.

Both women are natives of Spain and Charo is to be sworn in as a naturalized U.S. citizen next week.

Women form coalition for resolutions' passage

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Ten state delegation leaders concerned that "the campaign for women's rights faces a major challenge" at the upcoming national women's conference in Houston have formed a coalition to work for passage of proposed conference resolutions.

Creation of the "Pro-Plan Caucus" comes as various groups concerned with women's issues are organizing their troops and counting votes before debate starts on Nov. 19.

The proposed resolutions endorse ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, recognition of abortion as a woman's right, stricter enforcement of equal opportunity and equal credit laws, and increased efforts to prevent child abuse, wife beating and rape or to help victims of such cruelty. The proposed plan also covers child care, health questions and problems of homemakers, disabled women, minorities and rural and older women.

As the conference neared, there were these other developments:

— The National Organization for Women says it analysis shows that "the official delegations from 40 of the 50 states and approximately 80 percent of the national delegates that were elected favor progressive programs for American women." There are 1,442 elected delegates and 400 selected at large. NOW President Eleanor Smeal says 293 of the delegates are NOW members.

— The National Women's Political Caucus endorsed the proposed plan of action. Caucus leader Mildred Jeffrey said more than 300 of the delegates belong to her organization.

— Jean O'Leary, co-executive director of the National Gay Task Force, said in an interview that there will be 120 lesbian delegates, 60 of whom are "out," that is, publicly avowed as lesbian. Another 2,000 non-delegate lesbians will be in Houston, she said, to lend support for passage of a resolution calling for an end to discrimination against homosexuals.

— Rosalynn Carter, wife of the president, announced she will attend a pro-Equal Rights Amendment fund-raiser in Houston Nov. 18 and will address the delegates the following day. Former first lady Betty Ford also is expected at the fund-raising event.

— The Utah delegation, which opposes many of the proposed resolutions, has issued a leaflet outlining its own views. In "Utah Women Speak," they oppose the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion except in limited cases, and federally-funded child care. They recommend state action on child abuse, and favor family or church handling of many situations for which the conference plan recommends government action.

"We oppsoe allowing lesbians or homosexuals to adopt children, teach their way of life in schools, or otherwise proselytize their way of life," the Utah women said.

Goergia Peterson, who heads the Utah delegation, says there are "pro-family" delegates from 31 states, probably numbering 300 to 350 in all.

One of the leaders in forming the "Pro-Plan Caucus" was newly elected New York City Council President Carol Bellamy, who heads New York's delegation to Houston. Others who signed a letter to conference delegates urging coordination among the plan's backers were heads of delegations from Arizona, California, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Vermont, Washington State and Wisconsin.

"While this meeting has sometimes been portrayed as a confrontation of women against women, the real confrontation will be caused by right-wing extremist forces who have targeted this conference as part of a broad national political campaign," the state delegation heads said.

New hotels burgeoning on Baja California peninsula

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

Cabo San Lucas — Mexico wakes early. It is no land for slugabeds. Outside my window in the warm Baja morning, the maids shout cheerfully across the sandy desert courtyard.

"You bought a new dress? What color? Aiee!"

My watch says 7. (But maybe I forgot to reset it to Mexico time.)

We are at the tip of the Baja California peninsula.

The desert of sand and gray-green mesquite ends. The Sea of Cortez meets the Pacific. And there's nothing but 2,000 miles of flashing blue sea until you reach Bora Bora in the Islands-Under-The-Wind.

The last hotel on the last rocky point is Finisterra: "The End of the World."

In the courtyard of the new Hyatt Baja, an early workman propped a ladder outside my window. Climbed it with a can of paint and began singing:

"Two vices I possess,
"These I cannot control.
"One is to get drunk,
"And the other is to fall in love."

I decided I might as well get up.

We flew in from San Francisco on the first Hughes Airwest flight. Howard Hughes' death did not affect this modest airline which is spreading wings from Canada to Mexico.

They scoop up passengers from smaller towns as well as cities. Airwest will fly you from Redding or Eureka to Puerto Vallarta and make money on it.

They'll fly to Cabo San Lucas now four times a week. To celebrate it, they brought in a clutch of journalists.

The Hyatt Baja is chocolate brown. A sort of Moorish design. A courtyard fountain. A few straggly date palms — the only kind that can survive in Baja — are scattered among the buildings.

There's a breezy veranda dining room overlooking the deep blue sea. The food is good, but all the expertise of Hyatt can't change Mexico.

I said: "I'll have a XXX beer."

The bartender said: "Certainly, Senor. Immediately." He looked in the bar. He looked in the cupboards. He said: "Senor, we are out of XXX beer."

I said: "OK. I'll take a Bohemia."

He said: "We are also out of Bohemia."

You can go on like this forever. But I'm an old Mexican hand. I said: "What are you not out of?"

"We are not out of Corona," he said happily. I had a Corona. Ah, Mexico! It's good to be home again.

☆ ☆ ☆

The cape is exploding with new hotels. With condominiums. And everywhere people sigh: "Ah, if I had known! Only 10 years ago I could have bought all that land for a thousand dollars!"

The old dirt strip, where we ferried in from La Paz on a creaky DC-3, is closed. Hughes Airwest, Mexicana and Aeromexico land now on a paved airport, 30 minutes from the hotels at Cabo.

The phones are in. We used to be able to call La Paz on a radio telephone. But we couldn't phone another hotel a mile away to see what they were having for dinner.

☆ ☆ ☆

Besides the airlines, a thousand miles of paved highway runs from Tijuana to Cabo. Brings in campers who can park on hundreds of miles of empty, white sand beaches.

Fernando — I knew him when he could get you a fishing boat or a box lunch, a taxi or a condominium — came into the bar.

He said: "I now live in La Paz and commute here. Here I have an assistant."

Success has come to Baja.

Brezhnev receives letter from Carter

Moscow (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev received a message from President Carter Wednesday and said U.S.-Soviet relations have shown "a definite change for the better."

U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon handed Carter's message to Brezhnev during a meeting in the Soviet leader's Kremlin office that lasted just more than an hour.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said the message was a private letter relating to the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, celebrated Monday. But American officials here and in Washington decided to give its contents.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Brezhnev pointed to "a definite change for the better in relations between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. lately (and) reaffirmed the U.S.S.R.'s consistent course toward a steady and constructive development of relations.

"Specially emphasized was the urgency of finalizing the drafting of a new agreement on limiting strategic offensive arms on the basis of principled accords reached as a result of the recent talks," Tass said.

Carter has said a second strategic arms agreement can be expected "within weeks." Both sides have indicated progress in arms negotiations.

Western diplomats here say a Carter-Brezhnev meeting is a possibility early next year, after an accord is concluded, or even later this year, before an agreement is reached.

Carter has said he would like to meet Brezhnev before the end of this year, and the diplomats say a meeting in a neutral country is possible when Brezhnev travels to West Germany on a still-undisclosed date next month.

In a recent visit to Washington, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko showed a new Soviet willingness to consider the sort of informal "get-acquainted" summit meeting Carter has been hoping for.

The U.S. Embassy would not say whether Brezhnev and Toon discussed such a possibility.

Observers here suggested Toon may have discussed with Brezhnev the American concern about upcoming trials of Soviet dissidents. Last week, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said new Soviet moves against dissidents could create anti-Soviet feeling in the United States.

Toon may also have sought further details on Brezhnev's proposal last week for a ban on all testing of nuclear weapons, together with a moratorium on peaceful atomic explosions.

The Carter message and Brezhnev's comment came at a time of warming U.S.-Soviet relations, when Soviet propaganda attacks against the United States have fallen off markedly, and Jewish emigration from the U.S.S.R. has increased from an average of 250 a week to 400 a week.

Last month, Carter's national security adviser, Ebigniew Brzezinski, said relations between Washington and Moscow are "on the upswing," with a new strategic arms treaty near and "some narrowing of U.S.-Soviet differences on the Mideast."

On Oct. 21, Brezhnev said there had been "a definite turn for the better" in the arms negotiations and held out the possibility of an early agreement.

Sadat would even go to Israel to talk peace

Cairo, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat pledged Wednesday he would attend a new Geneva peace conference despite the quarrel over Palestinian representation and said he would go "even to the Knesset" to talk peace with Israel.

Waiving aside the current dispute on who should represent the Palestinians at a reconvened Geneva conference, Sadat said, "Procedural questions do not interest me at all. I am going to Geneva.

"But once I am there, there is no power on earth that can stop me from demanding total Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and the recovery of the Palestinians rights, including their right to set up their independent state," Sadat said.

"I am ready to go to the end of the world, in order to save one Egyptian soldier or officer from being wounded, let alone killed," he said.

"I am even ready to go to their (the Israelis') home, to the Knesset itself, in order to have talks with them," Sadat said.

In an inaugural speech to the Egyptian Parliament and which lasted nearly 2½ hours, Sadat said Israel was raising procedural problems to prevent the Geneva conference from being held.

"They want us to become nervous and say 'no' to the conference," Sadat said. "But I declare that I approve any procedural formula.

"We do not care about procedure. I declare it openly that we are ready to go to Geneva to discuss the question of peace, regardless of all procedural issues."

Sadat paid tribute to President Carter for devoting much of his efforts to the Middle East problem and for "his awareness of the cause of the Palestinian people, despite Israel's efforts to obliterate it for the past 25 years."

'Back-to-basics' movement is as old as little red schoolhouse

Bloomington, Ind. (UPI) — The "back-to-basics" movement in American education is as old as the little red schoolhouse.

"It's not new; it's just being recycled again," said Josephine Spear, associate professor of education at Indiana University.

"When you talk about going back to basics, how far back are you talking about?" she asked a recent English teachers conference.

Then she cited these critiques of American education:

1890 — "In the complaints drawn up by colleges against the high schools, it is the inability to write passably correct English that is most severely complained of."

1910 — "It is a common complaint among businessmen that young people seeking employment are not well grounded in the fundamentals."

1917 — "From every college in the country goes up the cry, 'Our freshmen can't spell, can't punctuate.'"

1965 — "The English language is dying because it is not being taught."

Soviet decision to buy U.S. grain reported

New York (AP) — The Soviet Union has decided to purchase substantial amounts of grain from the United States, an American businessman said Wednesday after returning from Russia.

Edward Lamb, owner of Lamb Communications Inc. of Toledo, Ohio, the Nevada National Bank and various manufacturing and leasing companies, said he was told by a Soviet government official that the decision "has definitely been made and it will be announced soon."

Lamb said Uri Bobakov, director of the economic division of the Institute for USSR-USA and Canada Relations, told him "that this was a political as well as an economic decision, since they have had substantial (grain) crops."

A week ago, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev announced that the Soviet grain harvest would be 194 million tons, 10 percent less than the 215 million tons the U.S. Agriculture Department and the CIA had estimated. The report triggered speculation that the Soviet Union would buy, or has bought, large amounts of U.S. wheat and corn to help make up for the shortfall.

"They have felt this purchase of large amounts of American grains will lessen tensions and will improve the general atmosphere between our countries," Lamb said. "He didn't say when the announcement would be made, or how much they intend to buy. But he did say the decision has definitely been made, that Russia will buy grain from the U.S."

Lamb said he met with "various officials of the Soviet Union" with whom he has had business dealings in the past.

"I'm not in the agriculture business, but this matter is of considerable importance. I was invited by Mr. Bobakov to discuss grain and other things," Lamb said. "Mr. Bobakov and others told me they are very anxious to relax tensions, and they think buying grain will help."

Some past grain sales to the Soviet Union have been criticized as overly generous in the interest of detente.

Lamb said he was not told how much grain the Soviet Union plans to buy from the U.S.

Official Agriculture Department export listings show that the Soviet Union has bought only 2.3 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn for 1977-78 delivery. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The United States gave Moscow permission a month ago to buy up to 15 million tons of wheat and corn in 1977-78. The Soviets bought some six million tons last year, the minimum annual purchase specified by a long-term agreement.

Not a jazz group, Night Train improvises in different styles.

Night Train on own track

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

The show has officially ended, but the crowd demands one more number from Night Train. Especially whooping it up is one man in back wearing blue jeans and flannel, as if this music he had been yee-hawing to all night was Charlie Daniels or Marshall Tucker, not jazz.

So Beverly Spaulding, the band's vocalist/pianist/composer, announces the encore. It's called "Mankind I Love You, But Sometimes You Act So Strange," a honky-tonking sort of tune with improvisational breaks.

Ms. Spaulding said she wrote that song the night the Symbionese Liberation Front met its death in a California shootout.

That night, the band was playing a club in Compton, Calif. — a bizarre scene it was, too.

The band was in the Los Apache, a cowboy bar in a black neighborhood, where beehived women with names like Maxina Porkchops were in the restrooms and a 300-pound bouncer guarded the door.

Tension mounted, what with all the political ideologies going down, fists started swinging, and the band, trying to unflare the tempers, started playing "Give Me That Old Time Religion."

Ms. Spaulding said she had a tune written before she went to the club, but after that night, she had the inspiration for the song's lyrics.

In the months that Night Train has been playing at the Clayton House lounge, the group has attracted a strong local following by playing music that draws from a broad range of styles: blues, bop, ragtime, even Handel.

"We're not a jazz group," Ms. Spaulding said. "What we do is improvise in different styles."

Night Train began over two years ago at the musician's union in Los Angeles. That's where Ms. Spaulding met George Neidorf, 38, another musician looking for work. They later added Craig Albert, 23, a bass player who had been playing around town with other Los Angeles musicians.

The band chose the name Night Train more out of necessity than out of any other significance. They needed a name because they were playing a lot of "Top 40 gigs," and there was a picture of a train on their first photograph.

They decided to start playing their own music several months ago in Pocahontas, Iowa. "We were playing Top 40 tunes, but they didn't sound the same," Ms. Spaulding said.

They decided that "for the rest of our lives we could make money playing what we want."

For audiences, Ms. Spaulding, 26, is the focal point of the band, primarily because of her versatility. She plays piano. She sings smoldering blues and has a clean, floating sound in her upper register. She also plays saxophone, flute, recorder and guitar.

Which is not to take away from the musicianship of the rest of the band. Albert, who plays both electric and string bass, composes. Neidorf has played with Big Joe Turner, the Johnny Otis Show, the Moscow Circus, the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater and Ballet American.

Night Train came to Lincoln earlier this year and has been back, off and on, ever since.

They like playing here: it's an "energetic community," Ms. Spaulding said, with many good local musicians. The band invites local musicians to come down and sit in with them.

"The music is real for us and I hope it moves the audience in some way," Ms. Spaulding said. "I hope it makes them excited."

"I hate to look out and see a sea of blank faces," Neidorf agreed.

The band recently recorded a demonstration tape of original tunes, but so far has not signed a recording contract.

They hope to establish a recording reputation in order to launch a concert career. That way, when they would enter towns, "people would already know what you do," Ms. Spaulding said.

A lot of people in Lincoln already do.

Former fatty no longer object of secret scorn

The Staffer

By J. L. Schmidt

There's nobody worse than a former fatty when it comes to criticizing America's eating habits and the people who have nasty ones.

I know, because 50 pounds ago I was fat. Everywhere I went I could hear the accusation in people's minds, "That man is fat." In clothing stores I could hear the salesman thinking, "Why is he looking at that rack? Those sizes are too small for someone who is fat."

Even the policeman who stopped me for speeding on Vine Street one Saturday morning came to the car and said, "You're going a little fat, er, fast aren't you."

My dog knew I was fat, "Arf, arf, fat," he used to say. Even my cat knew, "Meow-obese," she'd say. Obese? Yes, well cats do have a bit more class, you know.

My wife finally drove the message home one night, at a party, when she and friend were talking about the American economy and how we were all living off the fat of the land, which in her case translated that she was living with (one of) the fat(s) of the land. That did it.

A million fad diets crossed my mind: high protein, egg and grapefruit, high fiber, low carbohydrate, beer and cheese, low calorie . . . wait a minute, beer and cheese? That's what got me in trouble in the first place. I settled for the low-cal approach.

That was February. By the end of May my clothes were starting to bag, but how else do you put 36 inches of Schmidt into a size 40 sack? My wife reluctantly started taking in the seams, making me promise to keep the weight off, or face the task of letting the seams out myself. A seamstress I'm not, so I opted for reasonable eating habits.

The results have been great. I'm wearing clothes that haven't fit for years, I finally bought a new belt that was smaller than the previous year's model. The compliments have been ego-boosting.

Those clothing store people don't even look at me now, I'm just your average customer, I guess. At least the clothes fit better than they used to. Ever try to find something stylish in a man's pant with a larger than 36 waist?

I fear, however, that the skinny has gone to my head. I've even decided to keep in shape by using physical exercise, jogging, for sure.

My wife and I get up at 6:30 and hit the streets in our neighborhood, puffing away. It seems to have worked so far, weightwise, and the observations one can make at that early hour are something else.

Neophyte joggers, like us, abound. They are the ones with dirty tennis shoes, mismatched socks, shorts and shirts that don't match (although one suspects their mates do exist, in a closet or a drawer someplace), improper breathing and striding habits, etc.

Semi-serious joggers are a bit more scarce. They usually have matching socks, their tennies are probably still worn — from basketball or some other athletic endeavor — and they often wear basic gray or white shorts or sweatsuits.

The superjogger is able to cover long distances in a single bound, faster than a silver bullet, nearly decked out in a powder blue jumpsuit with matching shoes and socks. The shoes, by the way, are the type with curved toe treads and matching heals, guaranteed never to wear down.

There's at least one superjogger in every block . . . you've probably seen yours. If you happen to see the guy in the yellow sweatshirt, blue shorts and gray socks, wave — that's me.

Abby gives address for sex change operation

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old born-again Christian. I studied for the priesthood, but dropped out because I felt I wasn't "good" enough to serve the Lord while living a lie. I am now in training to be a male nurse.

The lie I am living is that I have always wanted to be a woman. I FEEL like a woman inside. I love all feminine activities — cooking, sewing, decorating — yet I am very athletic. I was encouraged to try out for the U.S. Olympic Track Team. (I broke many records in high school.) I detest hunting and fishing; never could I kill a living thing.

I am not a homosexual, but this desire to live as a woman is about to destroy me. Where can I get a sex change operation? I will go anywhere. How much would one cost? I will save a lifetime if necessary. I would rather be dead than go on living like this.

If the Lord really loves me, why did he give me a man's body with all the feelings and desires of a woman?

I have felt this way as long as I can remember. Please help me.

MISERABLE IN MAINE

DEAR MISERABLE: The Lord created all of us, and why He gave you a man's body, but the feelings of a woman, I do not know. Nature sometimes makes biological blunders, as is the case when one's body does not conform with his (or her) natural feelings. You are not alone. Don't feel guilty. One cannot help what he feels.

I believe that knowledge, skill and talent are divinely inspired, and that those scientists, physicians and surgeons whose combined efforts have made sex-change surgery possible, do so with God's guidance. For information about sex-reassignment surgery and related problems, write to:

Janus Information Facility
University of Texas Medical Branch
Galveston, Texas 77550

Theirs is a non-profit help agency for people such as yourself, so please send a stamped self-addressed envelope for their reply, and tell them Abby told you to write. All correspondence between you will be strictly confidential. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: Last night I went to sleep with the pillow over my ears to drown out the noise of my parents quarreling. I am the oldest of four, and I feel sort of responsible for the younger ones. My folks have been fighting ever since I can remember.

They fight about little things, like who put gas in the car last, and also over big things like money or my father's not spending enough time with my little brothers.

Abby, this is giving me a nervous stomach because they fight a lot at the supper table. What can a 13-year-old girl do?

FIGHTERS' DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Parents who quarrel a lot are not likely to accept criticism, advice or suggestions from their young children. Indeed, they would probably resent it, so there's nothing you can do. Just pray (and so will I) that they see this letter, recognize themselves and do something about it.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you recounted the instance of a woman who was trying to talk her boyfriend into going with her to a nudist retreat. (He wasn't too keen on the idea.) Do you suppose she just wanted to air their differences?

FURRUM, VA.

DEAR FURRUM: Either that, or just bare them.

DEAR ABBY: May I air my pet peeve? It's people who invite guests to their home to play cards and then bring out decks of cards that are old and filthy.

To compound the insult, they moisten their fingers when they deal. Ycch!

CANDY

DEAR CANDY: You may "air" your pet peeve, but don't expect results until you direct your compliments to the offenders.

Can you beat Social Security?

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — If Social Security paid you back all the money you'd ever put in, plus interest, how much would it be? Enough to live on in your old age?

Emphatically not. To finance your own benefits, at levels to which we've become accustomed, payroll taxes over the years should have been more than three times as high as they actually were. A good part of every Social Security check comes from other people's contributions, rather than our own.

Social Security started in 1937. If you had paid the maximum into the system since that date, and retired at the end of this year, your 40-year contribution would be only $8,728.35. Employers would have made matching contributions, for a total of $17,456.70.

Assuming those contributions earned interest at prevailing passbook savings rates from 1937 to present, your entire Social Security account would come to roughly $28,000.

How much retirement income can you get for $28,000? An annuity from an insurance company would pay a 65-year-old-man about $241 a month, and a woman, $213. But Social Security pays twice as much. Starting in January, 1978, a 65-year-old-man can retire on $459.80 a month. If married, the joint check would come to $689.70.

To get a lifetime annuity, with joint and survivor checks similar to those offered by Social Security, a 65-year-old would have to pay an insurance company around $93,500.

But even this understates the extent to which Social Security payments are subsidized. Under the program, you're also eligible for Medicare, death and disability insurance, and cost of living increases. If the price of insuring these benefits were deducted from your total contribution of $28,000, what would be left for retirement income?

In other words, it's wrong to think of Social Security as an insurance program. Insurance is structured only to repay what you put in, plus interest. If the annuity isn't enough to live on, that's your problem. Social Security, on the other hand, takes into consideration what you need to live on, and pays accordingly. If you yourself haven't paid enough to finance benefits, others are taxed to supply the money.

At bottom, Social Security is a massive income-transfer system, like welfare. Those with earnings are taxed to provide benefits for those who used to be self-supporting but no longer are — widows, orphans, the disabled, retired people without much income.

How much you get is decided by how long you worked and how much you made. But that's the only link between earnings and benefits.

Defining Social Security as a tax program, aimed at helping people without earnings, raises questions about a change in benefits just voted by the House of Representatives. The House proposed paying Social Security to everyone in the system over 65, no matter how much he earns. The argument was, they've paid into Social Security, so they're entitled to checks.

But do you want your personal payroll taxes to rise, in order to pay an extra $8,300 a year to doctors, lawyers, businessmen and others with the opportunity to make good money in their later years? At present, Social Security payments are reduced by $1 for each $2 of earnings over $3,000. The administration supports a modest increase in allowable earnings, but opposes universal payments.

Two reasons it has always been easy and popular to raise Social Security benefits are, first, that Americans haven't objected to payroll taxes, and second, taxes were small in relation to benefits.

Now those benefits have to be paid for, and payroll taxes have become an issue. Like it or not, we, as beneficiaries, we are going to shoulder more of the load.

PARKER BROTHERS

How would you choose among new small cars?

Fiesta has impressive European sales record.

Fiesta, the new front-drive minicar made by Ford in its German factory, comes to the United States with a brilliant European sales record. European sophistication in small cars is high; how could it have succeeded so well so quickly? What will it face in the U.S. as a half-native minicar?

Fiesta competes with Chevrolet's Chevette, the only true U.S. minicar. American Motors' Gremlin, with the four-cylinder Audi engine, represents an attempt to compete in this field, but the Gremlin is basically a larger subcompact, though its rear seat leg room is less than Fiesta's and the four-door Chevette's.

Gremlin has its followers, and the dazzling Audi engine will create additional converts. Probably they will come from bigger car owners unwilling to dial all the way down to the minicars and able to make do with the cramped rear seat.

Cramped rear seats are not on the specification charts of either Fiesta or the four-door Chevette. Both cars seat two people comfortably in the rear, and the Fiesta, with its flat floor — thanks to front drive — can squeeze in a third slim passenger, if the other two permit it. Chevette's four doors make entry and exit much easier for four people.

Fiesta's suggested retail price starts at about $3,700. The two-door Chevette may be less than that, but it is not a true four-passenger car, hence not comparable to Fiesta in that key aspect.

You cannot seat passengers comfortably in a rear seat whose leg room is less than 33 inches. Fiesta and the four-door Chevette are above that figure. Gremlin and the two-door Chevette are below it.

Gas mileages of Fiesta are 46 miles per gallon highway, 34 city, or 38 combined, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. You are not likely to do that well; my driving of the car leads me to believe that 32 or 33 is more realistic Chevette's mileages are in that area, but slightly less.

Fiesta's front drive power train consists of a transversely mounted four-cylinder, in-line, overhead valve engine, rated at 66 horsepower, and 97.6 cubic inches of displacement, with a two-barrel carburetor. This is a conservative design that is remarkably agile and responsive.

The four-speed, manual transmission is smooth, without balkiness and easy to use. You do not need to send out a search party to find first or second gear, and once found there is no resistance. That is not entirely true of Chevette, which has a less precise stick shift, not as agreeable as Fiesta's.

Nor is Chevette as quick in acceleration or as responsive in handling and steering as Fiesta, despite its excellent, four-cylinder, 98 cid engine which has a 10 percent increase in power over last year's engine.

Front drive has various advantages if properly engineered. In addition to the extra passenger space, it allows for better traction in snow, ice and wet weather. It makes for better control of steering, especially with rack and pinion. Its disadvantage is that all the power train weight over the front end can cause hard steering unless design factors correct for it, or power steering is added.

Fiesta doesn't need power steering, neither does the front-engine, rear-drive Chevette, but both cars are harder to steer by far than any big car with power steering.

In riding qualities Fiesta again has the better of it. It provides a smoother ride, better able to handle road shock than Chevette, but not better than Gremlin. Fiesta handles better than Chevette in quick maneuvers.

If it comes down to price, the choice between these three cars becomes a question of the individual dealer's willingness to trade and discount.

Fiesta, Chevette and Gremlin have varying degrees of novelty for 1978 that justifies discussing them together. How would we compare them with Ford Pinto and Chevrolet Monza, established small cars with only minor changes for 1978?

It depends on what you seek. If it's gas mileage Fiesta and Chevette are better. If you seek rear seat room these cars win again. But Monza, and its relatives in the other General Motors lines, has engine and other options that make for a dashing, sporty appearance that Fiesta, Chevette and Gremlin cannot equal. These options, especially if they include bigger engines, make Monza and the others considerably higher in price, hence no longer comparable.

Chrysler may hold many keys to this discussion. In January their Horizon and Omni, by Dodge and Plymouth, will make their debut. They are front-drive cars, the first small ones to be produced entirely in the U.S. Much is expected of them, according to word from early test drivers.

Opening lead - six of hearts.

Fancy plays are sometimes also very sound plays. One should not exclude an unusual play from consideration merely because it's unusual. For example, take this deal which required highly sophisticated treatment by the declarer for the slam to be made.

West led a heart and South could see great difficulties ahead. It seemed likely that he'd lose either a spade and a club, or two club tricks. Obviously, he could establish dummy's hearts if the suit was divided 4-3, but then he'd have no entry card to dummy to cash them.

However, declarer saw a faint ray of hope. It was clear from the lead that West had no clubs at all, and it was equally clear from the bidding that West had a large number of spades headed by the king.

Accordingly, South adopted a very rare method of play to make the contract. He cashed dummy's A-K of hearts, and on them discarded the A-Q of spades! He then ruffed a heart and, with both opponents following suit, the outlook became very promising indeed.

Next came a trump to dummy's ace followed by another heart ruff. This established dummy's 10-8 of hearts as tricks. The rest of the play was easy enough. South drew two more rounds of trumps and led his spade deuce towards dummy's jack.

West, with only spades left, was forced to go up with the king and return a spade to dummy's jack, permitting South to discard all three of his clubs and so make the slam.

The hand indicates convincingly that a soupcon of ingenuity applied at the right time and place can do no harm and may occasionally do a world of good in a tight situation. The apparently impossible can sometimes be accomplished. Never give up!

Sales of mopeds growing

Washington (UPI) — A rapidly growing number of Americans in search of easy, economical transportation have discovered the moped — a 20-inch-high bicycle equipped with a tiny motor for the lazy.

The Commerce Department released some fresh statistics that may qualify mopeds as a fad in much the same vein as hula-hoops and Nehru jackets.

During the first six months of this year, according to the government, 102,000 mopeds were sold in the United States — an increase of 223 percent over the same period in 1976.

And that is just the beginning, said a spokesman for Harley-Davidson, the only American producer of motorcycles.

"We are getting into the moped business, probably next spring," said Howard Whittington, a Washington regional executive for Harley-Davidson.

"We anticipate that another 200,000 mopeds will be sold during the second half of this year and up to 300,000 more in 1978."

He said the two main reasons for the popularity were convenience and "the energy thing."

Whittington also attributed startingly sales increase to the fact that most states do not have insurance or safety requirements yet although "the number of accidents are growing and some restrictions are bound to come."

Mopeds can be peddled just the same as a bicycle. But they also are equipped with an engine that has slightly more horsepower than the average lawnmower and an automatic transmission.

Industry spokesmen say mopeds get 100 miles per gallon or more and can attain speeds of about 30 miles per hour.

The Commerce Department noted that mopeds have been in use in Europe since the 1920s.

Most mopeds currently sold in the United States are imported from Austria, France, Italy and the Netherlands.

Ag leader blasts 'consumerists'

By Gary Kemper
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

South Sioux City — The president of the American Farm Bureau Federation Wednesday charged those in the consumer movement with "engaging in subterfuge, double-standards and hidden agendas."

Farm bureau officials released the statement after Allan Grant, scheduled to speak here at the Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy, did not arrive because of blizzard conditions.

Grant's statement said the consumer movement "has become a magnet for cultists, sadists and fringe elements of all kinds."

"It has become increasingly apparent that many of the most vocal consumerists privately employ the same subterfuge and double-standards which they publicly abhor," he said.

In response to Grant's comments, the Rev. Robert McEwen of the Consumers Union of Chestnut Hill, Mass., said he protested the use of the word "consumerists" and that the charges amounted to "nothing more than name calling."

"There's practically no problem on the American scene that Mr. Grant doesn't attribute to the consumer movement. I wonder who he blamed them on 10 years ago," McEwen said.

Grant blamed the consumer movement for "a national cheap food policy at the expense of farmers and ranchers; creation and perpetuation of food fads and farming myths; increased federal authority through the transfer of personal decision making to government; and support for the labor monopoly."

He said the public interest has been poorly served and misused and that many people in the consumer movement have been self-serving and intent on "hidden agendas."

McEwen said that Grant's statements could be applied to any movement, including the farm lobbies and even the Farm Bureau.

"I suspect the agricultural community has asked for and received more governmental intervention than the consumer movement has," he said.

"I can honestly tell you that I have heard nothing but support for the idea that those who work the land and those who are in the farming community should be sustained and should have a perfect right to fair prices and fair markets for their products," he added.

McEwen also said if the Farm Bureau attitude prevails, it would harden the position between urban and rural factions "at a time when the rural community needs cooperation."

Challenge seen in excess grain

SOUTH SIOUX CITY — One of the biggest challenges facing American agriculture today is the conversion of huge amounts of excess grain into "manageable reserves," said Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa.

"There are 63 million metric tons of excess grain in the United States and with the record crop this year that total could jump to 84 million by this time next year," he said.

Clark spoke here Tuesday night to a crowd of about 300 at the second annual Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy.

A grain reserve program must reassure foreign grain customers as well as U.S. farmers, he said. The new farm bill gives the secretary of agriculture the power to form a reserve by paying the farmer to hold his grain, Clark said, but details of the program are sketchy.

"Today many of us, including myself, are skeptical of how these reserve stocks will be handled," he said. "We do not know how the reserves will be built or controlled, or what companion program will be established. Frankly, it's time for those to be announced by the administration."

Clark said American agriculture depends on exports. "That's a fact that is not understood in this country, nor believed around the world."

The export grain market depends on the weather and recent years generally have been good for most countries, he said. "No policy will bring back the favorable conditions we had in 1974. Only the weather can do that."

Clark called for a change in the U.S. system of reporting agricultural situations abroad. He said accurate information about foreign grain production is essential for the U.S. to set priorities in farm policy.

Satellite photographs are the only sources of information about Soviet production he noted.

Neurologist says Bartunek suffered no lead intoxication

Omaha (AP) — A neurology specialist has testified that he found no evidence that Edward Bartunek suffered lead intoxication.

Bartunek stabbed his wife Diana to death and a suit filed on behalf of their six children seeks damages from Bartunek's former employer, the American Smelting and Refining Co.

The suit alleges Bartunek suffered lead intoxication because of exposure to lead during his work.

However, Dr. Andrew Hahn, professor of medicine and neurology at Creighton University, said he examined Bartunek after the man's wife was killed. He said he was looking for any evidence of toxicity or lead-related problems in support of the theory that Bartunek may have been suffering from an organic brain syndrome.

"I found no evidence that Edward Bartunek suffered lead intoxication," Hahn testified in U.S. District Court. "The lead levels in Edward Bartunek were indicative of lead exposure — not of lead intoxication."

Dr. Sheena Bonnyman, associate professor of psychiatry and behavioral medicine at Creighton, became responsible for Bartunek's treatment when he was admitted to Douglas County Hospital about a week after the killing.

She testified that she found he was suffering from paranoid schizophrenia — a functional rather than organic brain disorder.

Other medical witnesses in the trial have testifed that the amount of lead found in Bartunek's system was excessively high — high enough to indicate his mental disorder and the killing were direct results.

Bartunek was found innocent by reason of insanity in his wife's death.

IBP said out to corner market

Dakota City — An agreement between Iowa Beef Processors Inc. and a feedlot cooperative in the Pacific Northwest could begin a chain of events giving IBP a corner on the nation's cattle market, says a Natonal Farmers Organization official.

William Sellhorst of Dodge, director of the NFO slaughter cattle division, said, "It's an established fact that IBP fully intends to dominate the cattle industry."

IBP is the largest meatpacker in the United States, three times larger than its nearest competitor, MBPXL of Texas.

Under the agreement with North West Feeders Inc., effective Nov. 1, IBP is sharing profits with six corporations that operate some of the largest feedlots in the Northwest. The contract involves 30 percent of 22,000 federally inspected fat cattle slaughtered weekly in Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

Cattlemen say the five-year profit-sharing agreement is believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

During recent hearings before a congressional committee, Sellhorst charged that Iowa Beef, through its ownership of feedlots, tries to control the price paid cattlemen. At that time, an IBP spokesman denied it owned any commercial feedlots, although it has one in Iowa at which cattle supplements and feeding methods are tested.

The marketing arrangement with North West still does not mean IBP will have a direct hand in feedlot operations, an IBP spokesman said.

"We know their next move will be into Arizona. If they reach that point, the next area will be around Amarillo, Texas," Sellhorst said. "And the next logical move would be to curtail operations in the Dakota City plant."

A strike at the Dakota City headquarters plant has idled at least 1,700 IBP workers since February. Beef processing is continuing at nine other plants owned by IBP, and the company has reported higher profits every quarter this year.

With the expanded operation, Sellhorst said, IBP could break the strike with the threat of closing the Dakota City plant.

The IBP business venture in the Northwest involves sharing the profits 50-50 with North West Feeders Inc. after IBP slaughters, boxes and markets the beef.

"The way we see it is that what the feeders do best is feed, and the packers do processing," said Conny Bodine, IBP public relations vice president. "This agreement should smooth some of the ups and downs in the cattle-marketing industry."

In defending the agreement with North West, Bodine cited a statement, carried in the Western Livestock Journal, made by NFO President Oren Lee Staley. Staley stressed that the contract approach is desirable in order to build in profits at all levels of the food-production industry.

IBP operates plants in Boise, Idaho, and Pasco, Wash. The 6,700 cattle per week that will be supplied to the two plants are about 70 percent of what one shift can handle, IBP says.

Other beef-processing plants owned by IBP include the Dakota City facility, one at West Point, two in Iowa and one each in Kansas, Minnesota and Texas.

Sellhorst said the contract provides IBP with a virtual monopoly on the cattle industry in the Northwest. Increasing market domination by IBP, he said, has affected cattle producers' ability to bargain for better prices.

"If they continue to exert pressure to drive cattle prices down, we are going to see the smaller feedlot owners forced out of business," he said.

The owners of the six corporations in the IBP contract are Simplot of Boise; John McGregor of Pasco; Richard Hormaechea of Eagle, Idaho; and Bob Rebholtz, American Falls, Idaho.

The feedlot companies in North West Feeders Inc. are Simplot Livestock Co. of Grandview, Idaho; Simplot Feedlots of Caldwell, Idaho; McGregor Feedlots Inc. of Pasco; Snake River Cattle Co. and El Oro Cattle Co., both of American Falls; and Idaho Feedlot Co. of Eagle, Idaho.

The Simplot cattle feeders are the largest in the Northwest and among the largest in the nation, according to the Idaho (Boise) Statesman.

Burbach of Crofton, grain and feed dealer, former state senator and speaker of the Legislature during the 1975 session.

Rash of arson cases investigated by state

Omaha (UPI) — Nebraska Fire Marshal Paul Sarnecki said his investigators would be "out in force" Wednesday in hope of resolving at least 35 arson-related fires in the Douglas County unincorporated community of King Lake during the past year.

"We have some very good leads which we are going to follow through to the end," Sarnecki said. "I don't expect any more fires. They know we're there now."

State Sen. Neil Simon, Omaha, requested the state investigation following separate King Lake home fires last Wednesday, Friday and Monday.

"This is way too many fires in an area like that," Sarnecki said.

Sarnecki requested those with information about the incidents contact his office, adding he hoped arrests could be made by the end of the week.

In addition to the arson cases, King Lake is a bad insurance risk, officials say, because there are no fire hydrants and the lake is nearly dry.

Shooting death of Omaha man thought homicide

Omaha (UPI) — Police said Wednesday they were treating the shooting death of a young Omahan as a homicide.

Sgt. Charles Parker said the body of Robert McGinnis, 26, was found in his car with what appeared to be a small caliber bullet wound to the head.

Parker said no weapon was found at the South Omaha scene, and McGinnis' keys were not in the car's ignition.

Parker theorized the death occurred sometime between 11:30 p.m. Tuesday night and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Parker said McGinnis was a resident of the area and was employed as a partsman at an auto service center several blocks from where his body was found.

Investigators said the car was stuck in mud next to an alley and it appeared it was driven to the location before Wednesday's snowfall began around 1 a.m.

Area residents said they heard nothing unusual during the night.

County must pay huge medical bill

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County has been forced to assume a $35,000 medical bill for an elderly man because a $2,200 fund set aside for his burial makes him ineligible for Medicaid benefits, the County Board was told Tuesday.

Ray Garner, 79, was rendered helpless five years ago when a ladder on which he was working slipped and fell against an 8,000-volt electric line. He has been a long-term care patient at County Hospital.

Deputy County Attorney John Powers told the County Board Tuesday that Garner's guardian, Raymond Williams, has refused to take steps to qualify Garner for Medicaid.

Powers said because of a $2,200 fund set aside for Garner's burial in Louisiana, where his family lives, Garner is ineligible for Medicaid. Federal requirements stipulate a recipient can have no more than $1,500 in assets.

Williams told the board he has attempted to qualify Garner for Medicaid, but has been turned down four times because of the burial fund. Without it, Williams said county officials told him Garner would be buried in a "potter's field".

Williams also questioned the amount of Garner's hospital bill.

"He can't see, he can't talk, he can't hear," Williams said.

"How in the world can a hospital build up a bill of $31,000 for a man that I doubt would eat $3 worth of food a week?"

Commissioner Dan Lynch said he was "offended" because the $700 difference between Garner's assets and the Medicaid requirement has cost the county thousands of dollars in hospital bills.

"We are ripping off the taxpayers by $35,000 over this $700," Lynch said.

Gas exploded in basement.

Youth left critical by home explosion

An explosion early Wednesday morning in north Lincoln sent a 19-year-old boy to the hospital in critical condition and left the three other members of his family homeless.

Dan Oliver was hospitalized at St. Elizabeth Health Center with burns over 60 percent of his body after a gas explosion in the basement of his parents home at 6620 Knox.

Fire inspector Larry Cole said the explosion was caused when a leak in the gas line allowed natural gas to collect in the basement. Cole said he suspects that the flame from the furnace ignited the gas.

Cole said the explosion blew the south and west walls out of the bedrooms of the one-story frame house. Mr. and Mrs. Glen Oliver and their daughter, Barbara, 15, were in the home asleep at the time of the explosion but were uninjured.

A resulting fire caused considerable damage to the kitchen and a stairway leading to the basement, Cole said.

The Olivers were last reported to be staying with a neighbor, because, Cole noted, "They won't be able to live in the house for quite a while."

Project awarded endowment to improve students' writing

The National Endowment of the Humanities has awarded the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the state Department of Education $10,000 to begin a project to improve the writing skills of students throughout Nebraska.

The Nebraska Writing Project involves the selection of 25 outstanding teachers in composition throughout Nebraska for a five-week workshop to be held at UNL next summer. Participants will include elementary and secondary teachers and community and state college teachers.

Participants in the workshop will develop curriculum models for teaching composition. The participants will become writing consultants in their local school districts and nearby districts.

Nebraska Marine is on way to Japan

Washington (UPI) — A Nebraska Marine has been sent back to Japan to face marijuana charges after efforts to have him tried by United States authorities failed.

An aide to Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., said Pfc. Richard Wilson of Auburn was en route to Japan Wednesday.

The Defense Department and the White House said Wilson was being returned "in the interest of maintaining good relations with the Japanese government," Shasteen said.

The Japanese charges against Wilson involve marijuana he was sent while stationed on Okinawa and which he reportedly refused to accept. Wilson subsequently forged travel orders, returned to Auburn and later turned himself in at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

After an appeal from Curtis, the White House directed the Defense Department to ask Japanese officials to waive jurisdiction.

Shasteen said contacts had been made with local Japanese authorities requesting a waiver of jurisdiction, but "no contact was made with the federal government in Tokyo."

An attorney for the Defense Department, Deanne Siemer, said U.S. authorities in the field objected to making a request to higher Japanese authorities because it would damage U.S. relations with the Japanese.

The White House yielded to the objections, Shasteen said.

"I am greatly disappointed at the breech of credibility," Curtis said.

Shasteen said Curtis received assurances in writing from the Defense Department that it would provide Wilson with a Japanese lawyer and also a military attorney.

Gayed loses lawsuit against State Federal

Lincoln insurance man Risk Gayed has lost the lawsuit in which he claims State Federal Savings and Loan refused him a loan because of his nationality.

Gayed, a naturalized citizen from Egypt, applied for a loan from State Federal to buy property in University Place. He said the loan application was denied because of his nationality, and he was forced to borrow money elsewhere.

The loan institution said the application was denied because Gayed refused to supply copies of his tax returns for previous years.

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom gave the institution a summary judgment, or ruled in its favor without a trial. Urbom said the statute Gayed claimed the firm violated did not apply to the case.

Urbom said he agreed with State Federal's contention that no state laws specifically governing loan applications and therefore the firm was not subject to any liability under the Civil Rights Act.

8 named to boards by Exon

Gov. J. James Exon announced Wednesday he has appointed attorney James E. Gordon to serve on the Wyuka Cemetery Board of Trustees.

Gordon succeeds the late William M. Grossman, whose term will expire Jan. 1, 1979.

Exon also reappointed four people to serve on the Board of Examiners for County Highway and City Street Superintendents. They are William H. Green of Omaha, Arthur Hellwig of Plattsmouth, Donald Jiracek of Center and Richard Erixon, Public Works Director of Lincoln.

Exon also named three new members to the Nursing Home Advisory Council. They are Dr. Clarence Davis of Osceola, Paul Rupprecht of Schuyler and Margaret Welsh of Omaha. Reappointed to serve a three-year term was Elaine Connelly of Omaha.

Nebraska income supplements studied

More than a third of Nebraska's households receive some tax-supported income supplement, according to the 1977 Nebraska Annual Social Indicators Survey (NASIS).

Information on income sources obtained from a representative sample of Nebraska households found that the major income assistance for Nebraskans came through social security.

One-person households were determined most likely to receive income supplements, followed by households composed of a woman with dependent children and then those with several relatives living together.

Dr. Alan Booth, of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Department of Sociology, analyzed the findings in a report: "Tax Supported Income Supplements and Nebraska's Poor."

"Many of the tax dollars Nebraskans pay to the federal government come back in payments for public assistance in the form of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income, Social Security, railroad retirement, veterans' benefits, unemployment insurance or workmen's compensation," Booth said.

He said, however, that a substantial number of households receiving the benefits still have very low incomes. Despite the extensive coverage of the programs, there are 31,278 Nebraska households not receiving supplements even though they have income below the poverty level, according to Booth.

Booth reported that the approximately 35 percent of Nebraska households receiving some public income supplement get it from:

Social Security, 21 percent; veterans' benefits, 6 percent; unemployment or workmen's compensation, 5 percent; supplemental security income, 3 percent; Aid for Families with Dependent Children, 1 percent.

Lincolnite given city carpool prize

Richard Way, a switchman with the Lincoln Telephone Co., was presented with a commemorative keychain Wednesday for being the 1,000th person to join the city carpool program.

Making the presentation was Mayor Helen Boosalis, who also praised LTT officials for encouraging the energy-saving carpooling effort by giving preferential parking to carpoolers.

About 64 new carpools have been formed in the program, in which interested persons are matched for home and work locations by computer. The program began in May.

Chamber sets meeting, names new members

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce annual meeting, set for February, will feature news commentator Paul Harvey as the keynote speaker.

Tickets will be sold, but prices haven't been set.

The dinner also will kick off a public relations campaign for the chamber, the Lincoln business community and free enterprise in general, according to a chamber spokesman.

In other business, the chamber elected five new board members: Adna Dobson of Dobson Bros. Construction; Mike Lawlor of Lawlor's; Miles Tommeraasen of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; Charles Thorne of First Federal; and Lee Schroeder of Dorsey Labs.

Centrum parking lot bid chosen

Peter Kiewit and Son Co. submitted the apparent low bid of $4,165,000 for construction of the Centrum parking garage.

City purchasing agent Wayne Harvey said that city officials will spend about 10 days making sure the bid complies to city specifications before the contract is awarded.

It calls for work to begin immediately and that the parking garage be completed by Nov. 1, 1978. The contract has a penalty of $500 per day for the first seven days of delay and $1,000 per day thereafter for delay which is not due to bad weather or other excusable events.

Other bidders were Lueder Construction of Omaha, with a bid of $4,400,000; Olson Construction, $4,444,444; Sharp Bros., $4,644,602 and Kingery Construction $4,811,000.

The parking garage will be built on the south half of the Centrum block, which is bounded by N, O, 11th and 12th Sts.

The north half of the block will be a retail center of small shops. The center is to be completed by the spring of 1979.

6,480 workers in Nebraska get back wages

Omaha (UPI) — The U.S. Labor Department said Wednesday 6,480 Nebraska workers had received $822,486 in back wages during the past fiscal year from employers who violated the fair labor standards act and other statutes.

The department said some of the funds came from cases more than a year old.

The department said during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, its compliance officers discovered 6,910 Nebraska workers were allegedly underpaid a total of $778,870. Some of those cases were yet to be resolved, the department said.

Of the $778,870 total, federal equal pay statute violations accounted for $105,883 due to 1973 workers allegedly paid less than workers of the other sex doing substantially equal work.

The department said other violations concerned those of the minimum wage, overtime and age discrimination laws.

Cancer group plans Smokeout

The Lancaster County Unit of the American Cancer Society will try to get 4,000 persons to pledge not to smoke on "The Great American Smokeout" Nov. 17.

The smokeout is an effort by the Cancer Society to get Americans across the country to stop smoking for one day.

Pledge booths will be set up at the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln Center, Nov. 10 and 11 from noon until 5 p.m., State Federal Savings & Loan in Havelock Nov. 10 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and the Gateway Gallery Mall Nov. 13 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Storm leaves roads a mess

Skies were clearing late Wednesday across Nebraska after winter snows made a first, strong showing earlier Wednesday and Tuesday night.

The Nebraska State Patrol said highways were returning to normal Wednesday evening except in the extreme northeast, where blowing snow was drifting across the highways.

Snow and ice had turned roads in Lincoln and Lancaster County into chaos during the day. A Lancaster County sheriff's office spokesman said eight accidents were reported in the county, none of them serious.

City motorists fared much the same in morning rush-hour traffic, although no one was reported seriously injured in a storm-related accident. However, a five-car fender-bender was reported near 33rd and Leighton Avenue during the morning.

A witness for a case in Lancaster County District Court ran off the road while trying to get to the hearing. Another witness offered to go and help him out. The rescuer found himself in the ditch as well, and both men got to the courtroom only after having their cars pulled back onto the road.

Most schools in Lancaster County outside of Lincoln were closed Wednesday. One exception was the Yankee Hill School on West Pioneers Boulevard, which was open as usual. Lincoln public and Roman Catholic schools also remained open.

County Superintendent Glenn E. Turner said he did not expect any schools to remain closed on Thursday.

Lincoln Electric System spokesmen attributed power outages in several parts of the city to the combination of ice, snow and heavy winds.

The south part of Lincoln Air Park was without power for about 1½ hours, and a four-block area downtown was blacked out briefly before business hours began.

LES officials said they expected all power to be restored by late Wednesday, including the two areas still without power late Wednesday afternoon — 51st to 53rd Streets from A to Franklin and 28th and 29th, O to L Streets.

The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. reported some 1,200 customers were without phone service at one point during the day, but service was restored by late afternoon.

The northeast corner of the state did not make nearly as swift a recovery from the storm as the Lincoln area. About half the town of Crofton was reported without power but Nebraska Public Power District crews could not reach the town because of drifting, blowing snow.

Snow, slush and fender-benders were common in Lincoln Wednesday.

South Sioux City reported 4 inches of snow, winds up to 69 miles per hour and more snow flurries predicted for Wednesday night. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland's scheduled speech to the second annual Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy in Sioux City was canceled and plans for continuing the conference Thursday were not known.

A planned caravan of 40 to 50 angry farmers from O'Neill to South Sioux City was also canceled because of the weather.

A spokesman for the Burt County sheriff's office said even snowplows were staying off the highways, except to rescue stranded motorists.

"It doesn't do any good to plow because the snow just drifts back over the highway again," the spokesman said.

Forty-one motorists were stranded overnight Tuesday in the Sidney National Guard Armory. They were able to leave Wednesday morning, but roads in the Panhandle remained icy.

Near Norfolk, eight stranded motorists were rescued from vehicles in snow drifts. A State Patrol spokesman said "people were stuck all over the place," and that some who were missing may have made it to nearby farmhouses.

The path of the storm that swept through Nebraska curved north toward Iowa, eastern South Dakota and Minnesota. Police reported at least 150 cars stranded along Interstate 29 between Omaha and Sioux City, with rescue teams on their way to the area.

The National Weather Service said the two winter blasts driven by low pressure fronts stormed into Nebraska beginning in the west on Tuesday afternoon and opening a second front in the central and southeast Wednesday morning.

Gusts of 60 mph were common and gusts of more than 80 mph were reported in the northeast part of the state. Winds at Norfolk were clocked at 83 mph.

Snow depths ranged from 8 inches, at Crete, Pilger and Plainview, to 2 inches. Randolph and Wayne reported 6 inches and 5 inches of snow were reported at Norfolk, David City, Bloomfield and Osceola. Lincoln had 2 inches of snow and Omaha reported 3 inches.

School petition fails in Waverly

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Cheney — The Waverly School Board rejected a petition calling for the dissolution of the Cheney School District.

The board's action last Monday kills the current drive by some Cheney district taxpayers to divide the district among four surrounding ones.

The board of the Bennet-Palmyra district east of Cheney and the Lincoln School Board both have accepted the petition, which so far has been signed by about 200 people — or 65% of the eligible voters of the Cheney district.

The fourth neighboring school board involved, Norris School District No. 160 at Firth, is scheduled to vote on the matter Thursday night.

By state law, if any of the affected districts refuses to accept the change in boundaries, the petition fails.

Those sponsoring the petition have another recourse, however: they could circulate a new petition calling for an election. Only 25% of the Cheney district voters would have to sign a petition to put the dissolution question on the ballot in a special election, County Superintendent Glenn E. Turner confirmed.

But the petition would have to include a map showing how the district would be divided, and even if the Cheney voters were to approve the proposal at the polls it would still have to be accepted by each of the surrounding school boards affected, Turner explained.

Trudy Schweppe, a member of the Cheney School Association and a strong supporter of the kindergarten-through-sixth-grade school, said she questioned whether the measure would win at the polls if Waverly refuses to take the Cheney students.

"Too many parents have their older children at Waverly," she said. Cheney students in grades seven through twelve presently attend the school district of their choice, under contract with the Cheney district or by tuition.

If the district were dissolved, many students could be forced to transfer from the junior or senior high school they are attending into a different school, according to the new district lines.

Since Waverly has taken a stand against the redistricting, many students could be forced to leave the Waverly school system as a result, Mrs. Schweppe said.

Waverly school board members reportedly felt extending the district south towards Cheney would cause busing problems. Some members argued that the added tax base would not offset the added cost of educating the five or six additional grade school students who would attend the Waverly school.

Grain shipment stoppage urged

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood has urged Nebraska farmers to stop the shipment of all grain from farmer-owned elevators.

"If every farmer-owned elevator in Nebraska today refused to ship any grain, there would be some local problems," the Legislature's Agriculture Committee chairman acknowledged.

But "those problems would be minor compared to the economic disaster which we all face if we continue to allow someone else to price the products of our labor," he declared.

Schmit said farmers should also "place every possible bushel of grain under government loan to prevent its entering the market channels."

And, he suggested, every farmer should "set aside a portion of his products and dedicate it to a new use, such as the production of grain alcohol to help solve our energy needs.

". . . When someone tells us it is not economically feasible to burn $1-per-gallon alcohol when you can buy gasoline for 60 cents, point out to them that if the use of alcohol will raise the price of the balance of the corn from $1.75 to $2.75, then it does make sound economic sense to divert some of our products from the feedyard to the fuel tank."

Nebraska farmers "should not have to wait a year, two or five years for prices to improve," Schmit said in a prepared statement.

"We are producing a product which everyone needs, a product without which many people in the world would starve.

"It is absolutely immoral for farmers to suffer financial loss because of market manipulation which I feel is deliberately planned and which farmers must learn to avoid if they are to survive."

Schmit said it is "obvious" that political solutions are "not going to help" farmers.

"The facts are that I am convinced that there are persons within the federal government and, unfortunately, I would have to say, within the U.S. Department of Agriculture, who are determined to keep farm prices low," he said.

Policeman shows scars to jury

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City — The young policeman who was critically wounded here in a July 9 shootout spent 90 minutes Wednesday testifying against the man accused of shooting both him and fellow officer Gary White, the latter fatally.

Pete Rishel, a boyish-looking Plattesmouth native who had turned 23 since the incident, calmly recounted details of the early-morning tragedy. Over defense objections, he also opened his shirt to show an Otoe County District Court jury the chest scars he bears from shotgun pellets and related surgery.

Defendant Robert Beers, 39, fidgeted slightly as the victim told of losing "part of my right thumb, my gall bladder, one kidney and part of the liver." The officer's bloodstained shirt and undershirt were also introduced as evidence, although Judge Raymond Case stopped the prosecution from giving the jury a close-up look.

Rishel said the first shot which was fired in the episode, occurring about 3:45 a.m. behind the Nebraska City police station, was the one that struck him. That testimony was especially noteworthy, since County Attorney William F. Davis said in opening statements that a main part of Beers' defense will be his contention that "he heard a shot before he ever fired."

"He claimed that is the justification for his act and I guess that's the real issue you will have to decide," the attorney admonished the three-man, nine-woman jury.

Rishel, who was permitted to remain in the courtroom even though other witnesses were sequestered, said he heard an undetermined number of other shots after he fell wounded. One which came a little later than the others apparently struck White, whom Rishel said "fell backward and out of sight."

Prior to the last shot, the testimony indicated Rishel fired once toward the pickup. In the process of drawing his revolver at the moment he was hit, the policeman dropped the weapon but retrieved it and fired the one time.

"I was in too much pain to recognize how many shots there were or what kind . . .," the officer stated.

Another eyewitness, Steve Gruber, recalled hearing only three shots, which he described as "loud roars." He explained that he had driven to the police station after Beers' wife came to his house about 3 a.m. reporting that her husband had beaten her and threatened to shoot her.

Lacking a telephone, Gruber said he drove to the police station to report her complaint. When he walked outside with the two officers, who intended to look for Beers, the man came driving through the alley in a pickup. Their efforts to halt him failed.

When the officers got in their car to give pursuit, Beers reportedly turned around and was approached by Gruber, who asked him to talk with the police. When Gruber saw that Beers had a shotgun, he warned the officers whom he said then yelled at Beers to lay down the weapon.

As Gruber took cover on the ground beside a car, he reportedly heard two shots fired in quick succession, followed "a few seconds later" by a third. Seeing a wounded officer (apparently White) drop his gun, he said he tried unsuccessfully to push the revolver within reach of the officer.

Other witnesses giving first-day testimony were local Police Chief Joe Lange, consulting engineer Ron Hazard and fireman Larry Rains. The latter, awakened at the fire station by shouting and "firecracker-like noises," said he looked out and saw one shot fired from an unidentified man leaning over the hood of a pickup. Rains also joined rescue squad members rushing to the scene.

Other testimony related that Beers fled on foot and borrowed a friend's car. He was apprehended a few hours later at an Interstate-80 rest stop near York.

Kansas to ponder gasohol proposals

Topeka, Kan. (UPI) — Gov. Robert Bennett Wednesday said Kansas will take a serious look at any cooperative proposals for gasohol production in this state or neighboring Colorado and Nebraska.

Bennett said he has not had a chance to study recommendations presented Tuesday by Kansas Energy Director Steven Harris and Edward Bruske, secretary of economic development.

The pair forwarded a report to Bennett that focused primarily on funds available from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for research and development of a blend of low lead gasoline and alcohol manufactured from agricultural or wood products. Up to $60 million in federal funding may be available to develop four pilot plants to investigate gasohol production.

Bennett said Kansas would consider opting for a pilot project or joining Colorado or Nebraska in an experiment. But, he said, although gasohol holds some promises for agriculture and energy, experts are divided on the problems inherent in such fuel development.

The governor said many experts insist that gasohol production is only marginally cost effective, considering the energy needed to produce it and the amount of fuel that can be produced.

"It appears it wouldn't be at all cost effective if the price of wheat increases," Bennett said.

The governor added it does not appear major marketing problems have been solved either.

Sentences of 2 young offenders upheld

Age can be a factor in reducing a prison sentence, but not when a youthful offender has a long record of criminal involvement, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The high court upheld the sentence of Nigel Davis for the robbery of the Kellogg Center on East Campus last November. Davis, who was 16 at the time, received a three-to-six year prison term.

Davis had contended his sentence was excessive because it would expose him to contact with habitual criminals for a significant amount of time.

But the court noted that Davis' criminal career began at age nine, and his "extensive juvenile record" contains a list of larcenies and assaults. He also had been placed in two foster homes and had spent time in the Lincoln Regional Center and the Youth Development Center in Kearney.

The Lancaster County District Court had noted in sentencing Davis that "Everything else had been tried."

"Defendant's (Davis') behavior reveals that he has become a serious threat to society and must be treated accordingly, regardless of age," the court said.

In a similar case, the high court upheld a jail sentence for Walter Trusdale, 18, for burglary and wrongful use of an auto. Trusdale was sentenced to 15-to-30 months on the first charge and 90 days on the second by the Lancaster County District Court.

The court noted that Trusdale also had a long history of juvenile offenses, starting with burglary at age 13.

Trusdale had appealed his sentence contending the abuse a young inmate would receive from older prisoners "could be devastating."

The court said such an argument was not without force, but added, "any problems which may exist in the penal institutions of this state cannot be solved by refusing to sentence prisoners to incarceration."

Parents' attempt to gain custody fails

Parents can lose their natural rights over their children by abandoning them, the Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The high court upheld a Scotts Bluff County District Court decision against Samuel and Eva Hernandez that found they had abandoned two of their children to the care of foster parents and therefore terminated their parental rights.

The two children were put in a foster home in July 1967 after the Scotts Bluff County Welfare Department discovered the children were suffering from malnutrition and lice. After being placed in the foster home, the parents visited the children only three times in seven years.

The foster parents plan to adopt the children, the court noted, and one of the children has no recollection of her natural parents.

The children were in "legal limbo" for six years before their mother made any attempt to regain custody, the court said.

Mrs. Hernandez told the court she did not request that the children visit her because of unsuitable housing, her former husband's alcoholism and a reluctance to approach the welfare department.

Citing a previous case, the court reiterated: "Children are not chattels. A bare assertion of parental natural right cannot prevail against the clear best interests of the children and the overwhelming evidence of disinterest and abandonment."

Letters readied for time capsule

Possibly the longest letter delivery in Nebraska's history is to take place soon when the Bicentennial Time Capsule is planted in the State Office Building.

The two cubic foot capsule will contain artifacts, photos and documents depicting Nebraska life in 1976. Included will be more than 100 letters from officials throughout Nebraska to those who follow in 2075.

"It's taken so long to get the capsule ready because we've been awaiting letters from elected officials in the state and college presidents from public and private schools," said Marvin Kivett, director of the State Historical Society and administrator of the time capsule project.

The Bicentennial Time Capsule Committee meets at 1:30 p.m. Thursday to sort out all of the materials.

"Everyone we asked for contributions sent more than we needed," Kivett said. "So we'll see if everything fits."

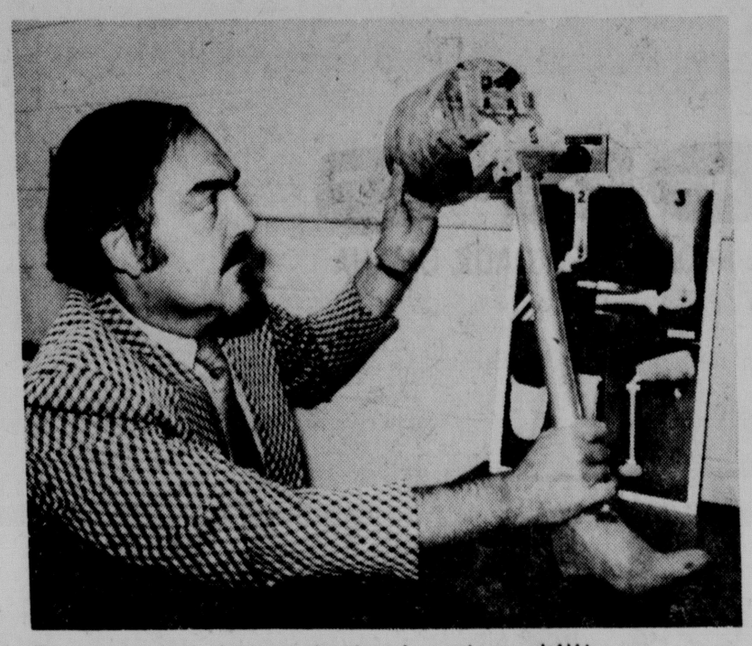
Every facet of Nebraska life is going to be represented, Kivett said, from agriculture to urban minority group activities and concerns.

"We tried to cover everything," Kivett said. "We even put in some food stamps from the Welfare Department."

Then, there are the letters.

"Most of the letters give advice to their counterparts of that year and even some congratulations for still being around after 100 years," Kivett said.

The capsule will be placed in a stone tomb in the State Office Building when that building is dedicated sometime in January.



Baumgarten demonstrates knee's mobility.

Students design 'Nebraska Knee'

University of Nebraska-Lincoln mechanical engineering students have developed a new device for above-the-knee amputees called the "Nebraska Knee."

The Nebraska Knee was designed by computer to make it as close to the natural leg as possible, according to Henry Baumgarten, professor in the College of Engineering and Technology.

Baumgarten, whose classes designed the knee, said the reason why the Nebraska Knee was designed like a natural leg was because artificial limbs can cause abrasion to the remaining part of the leg and a more natural leg helps compensate for the psychological loss of the limb.

Students in Baumgartens' classes have also developed a mechanism for persons recovering from ruptured disc surgery and have constructed a feeding apparatus for a young boy with a severed muscular disorder.

Solar workshop composes 'wish list'

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Did you hear the story about the man who ordered a solar water heater for his home?

When the workman installing the heater started to attach it to the west wall, the buyer decided to cancel his order.

That story, which made the rounds at the Solar Energy Workshop at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Wednesday, is just one example of the problems associated with the newly developing solar energy equipment.

In addition to the problem of the few trained solar tradesman, the 50 workshop participants mentioned other needs in education, research and information coordination and dissemination.

It would be nice to have more consumer education, education for lending institutions, more information about solar projects and equipment being produced and a regional inventory of possible future energy sources, said workshop participants.

It would be nice to have market research on potential consumer attitudes, guides for building codes and a testing laboratory for consumer protection.

"Where does an individual turn with questions? Where do we get to the horse's mouth? Someone needs to create a horse's mouth to help us get out the information," said one workshop participant.

Some help is on the way, according to the agencies that coordinated the workshop.

Money will probably be available soon through the Midwest Regional Solar Energy Planning Venture for states to provide someone to help coordinate solar activities, according to Alan Kaske, senior staff for the planning venture.

The University of Nebraska will also be establishing an Energy Extension Service next spring for "educational type programs," according to Don Edwards, director of the NU Energy Research and Development Center.

The State Energy Office, with the help of federal money, is working on an energy educational curriculum for both adults and public schools, said George Dworak, director.

"The state of Nebraska really hasn't explained that while the federal government sent $800,000 to Nebraska for energy programs, the state only spent $78,000 of its tax funds last year.

Dworak said he will be asking for a much bigger state budget this year.

Iowa gas price up

Centerville, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa-Southern Utility Co. announced a 5.7 percent increase in natural gas prices.

Broadcast members honored

Two broadcasters were honored Wednesday at the annual initiation ceremony of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln chapter of Alpha Epsilon Rho national broadcast honorary.

Paul Wichsmeyer, president of Chronicle Broadcasting of San Francisco and former manager of WOWT-TV in Omaha, and James D. Johnson, executive vice president of the Nebraska Television Network received professional memberships into the chapter.

Twenty-three School of Journalism broadcasting majors initiated as student members are: Richard Atherton, Robert Barney, John Crancer, Sayre Darling, Steve Dermann, Verle Finke, David Graupner and Eugene Hinkle of Lincoln; Kenneth Christie, Paul Tranisi and Ronda Scolting of Omaha; Martin Beecham, Palmyra; Susan Friehe, McCook; Lance Hernandez, Kimball; Susan Lechtenberg, Butte; Jean Mahon, South Sioux City. Randall Pence, Holmesville; Craig Shaffer, Alma; Clifford Chase, Council Bluffs, Iowa; Deborah Holmes, Buffalo, N.Y.; Steven Larson, Duluth, Minn.; Rodney Porter, Levittown, Pa., and Steven Stueck, Dysart, Iowa.

Citizens' group will 'monitor' sewer projects

Dennis Roether, chairman of Concerned Neighbors, the citizens' group which promoted the storm sewer bond issue, said the group will stay in existence.

"We plan to monitor progress on the storm sewer work and we plan to broaden our scope to other areas," he said.

City officials said work on the storm sewer projects funded by the $6.8 million bond issue will begin next spring. Completion of the projects may take three years, officials said.

Approval of the bond issue came after a hurried campaign in which expenditures amounted to only about $750.

"I don't think it hit people what they accomplished until this morning," Roether said of workers in the bond issue campaign.

Demo resigns to join GOP

Roger Fleury, president of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Young Republicans organization said Wednesday he is happy to welcome the former president of the UNL Young Democrats, Doug Crary, to the Young Republicans.

Crary resigned Tuesday saying he would re-register Wednesday as a Republican.

Crary said he resigned because of apathy among Young Democrat members, lack of cooperation from its executive committee and from the Senior Democratic Party.

Farnham promises quick racing dates ruling

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Norfolk — The possibilities that await the Nebraska State Racing Board's schedule decision are almost as limitless as the scheduling possibilities.

Board chairman Harry Farnham closed Wednesday's first ever special "protest" meeting with the word that the Ak-Sar-Ben (Omaha) contingent, which was snowbound, needed to be informed before proposals presented by the Lincoln, Atokad (South Sioux City) and Columbus race track managers and two members of the Horse Benevolent and Protection Association, could be considered.

"We need a quick decision and we hope to have a 1978 schedule that pleases most everyone involved by next week," said Farnham.

"Anything is still a possibility in scheduling and that includes the original proposal that brought about the protests from Lincoln, Atokad and Columbus," Farnham said.

Columbus general manager Warren Albert and Atokad manager Harold Smock all but promised that if the original schedule proposal, which called for a 36-day Lincoln meeting split into two-three-week meetings sandwiched around a 21-day Columbus meeting is followed, they would call for legislative action.

"There is chaos in the original proposal starting with Lincoln's split and ending with the four-day overlap when Lincoln could be closing and we'd be starting," said Smock.

"The secret of the success of the five tracks in Nebraska is that we haven't competed with each other," Smock said.

"You're talking pure failure when you talk of an overlap. Failure for both the small tracks and the small horsemen," said Smock. "And if you're thinking Atokad is going to die, you're going to see one of the damnest fights you've ever seen before we do.

"If it takes legislation, like progressive taxes, then we'll do it that way," said Smock, who explained that the progressive tax is the method of California, Illinois and other states have used to keep the large tracks from knocking out the smaller tracks in the state.

Nebraska State Fairgrounds general manager Henry Brandt added that if the original proposal was kept that Lincoln may be forced to race during the initial three-week meeting, but not the second three-week period after the Columbus meet.

"There is no way we can race sooner than three weeks after the state fair, because of economics and time," said Brandt, who formally submitted the "block week" scheduling.

"We have pioneered Monday racing, twilight racing and the noon daily double," said Brandt. "But we don't want to innovate and pioneer the split season in Nebraska because it is economically unfeasible.

"We can't race during the state fair and if you want to get 50,000 letters or more from the Future Farmers or the 4-H people then just try to race during the fair," Brandt told the board.

"Racing during the State Fair would eliminate the grandstand from any activities other than racing," Brandt added.

Of the two plans submitted to the board Wednesday, one called the "blocked weeks" is supported by Albert, Brandt and Smock. The other features the Lincoln meet following the Fonner (Grand Island) meet and drew the objections of Fonner Park general manager Al Swihart.

"Both of those plans have Fonner starting in the last week of February and we will protest, even to the point of having another meeting, to keep the start from being any earlier than March," said Swihart.

"But we do need a decision soon because we are already late in sending out our condition books and stall blanks," Swihart added. "We're looking for a quick solution."

The proposal presented by R.E. Lee, president of the HBPA, and Warren Whisenand was: Fonner — Feb. 22-Apr. 22, with four days of racing the first four weeks and five days per week the last five weeks; Lincoln — Apr. 25-June 3, with five days a week the first week and six days a week the last five weeks; Ak-Sar-Ben — June 6-Aug. 26, with five day per week racing the first four weeks and the rest six days per week; Columbus — Aug. 29-Sept. 30, with five days per week racing for five weeks; Atokad — Oct. 4-Nov. 26, with five or six days the first two weeks and four days the last two weeks.

Miami on minds of Huskers

Miami, warm weather and the Orange Bowl, were on the minds of the Nebraska football team Wednesday.

With piles of snow surrounding Memorial Stadium and winds driving the temperatures lower, one Husker scribbled this message on the lockerroom blackboard — Think Miami: High 87, Low 73.

With wins over Kansas and Oklahoma standing in the way of the Huskers enjoying the warm Miami weather, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne Wednesday sent his squad through a two-hour workout.

Because of the poor conditions, Osborne was forced to split the workout so both the offense and defense could take advantage of the indoor AstroTurf facilities in the Fieldhouse.

While the defense spent all of its workout inside, the offense did work 50 minutes outside.

"Of course, we'd like to be outside all the time," Osborne said. "But we had a pretty good practice considering the weather."

In the injury department, Osborne said Tom Sorley (ribs), Kerry Weinmaster (ankle), Jeff Pullen (ankle) and Tom Davis (knee) all looked doubtful for Saturday's game against Kansas.

Panel lifts suspension of Gerard

New York (AP) — The suspension of Dr. Mark Gerard, central figure in the Belmont ringer scandal, was lifted Wednesday afternoon by a five-judge appellate division panel, pending a full hearing before the New York Racing and Wagering Board.

At the same time, it was learned that Dr. Gerard's wife, Alice, was subpoenaed to appear Thursday before a Nassau County grand jury which is taking testimony in the case.

Mrs. Gerard's attorney, Richard Reisch of Mineola, N.Y., said he would go to Nassau County court Thursday morning to request that her appearance be delayed until next week. The postponement would give her attorneys enough time to prepare her for testimony, said Reisch, who has never met in person with Mrs. Gerard.

In a unanimous decision, the five-judge appellate court panel ruled that Dr. Gerard's suspension should be lifted until his case is heard before a the Racing and Wagering Board.

"There is no indication in the record that the appellants have made any finding that the public health, safety or welfare imperatively required such emergency action as a suspension prior to a hearing," said the opinion, authored by Justice Frank Gullotta.

The opinion upheld the Nov. 4 ruling of State Supreme Court Judge Theodore Velsor.

O.J. operation said 'successful'

Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI) — Star running back O.J. Simpson underwent successful surgery Wednesday to remove a torn cartilage from his left knee.

A Buffalo Bills spokesman said the operation was performed by team physician Dr. Joseph Godfrey at Mercy Hospital in Buffalo. Godfrey said the surgery went smoothly and no recovery problems are anticipated.

Godfrey described the surgery as a "straight-forward cartilage operation with no ligament involvement."

Allen determined Hartung to be Husker

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Jimmy Hartung, who can write his own ticket to college, says he may not choose Nebraska, even though the Cornhuskers are becoming a national gymnastics power under coach Francis Allen.

"Right now, I'd say it's between Oklahoma and New Mexico with Nebraska a close third," Hartung says as he prepares for his third straight all-around title in the state gymnastics meet at the NU Sports Complex.

Hartung's Omaha South powerhouse is also shooting for a third straight state championship.

Competition begins in the track arena Thursday at 5:30 p.m. Friday's competition starts at 6 p.m.

Hartung, one of America's top hopes for the '78 World Games in France and the '80 Olympics in Moscow, would cause Allen a heart attack if he got away.

"We'd have to shoot him," Allen says. "The Omaha mafia would be called in. This is not going to be another Gale Sayers. Jimmy Hartung is not getting out of Nebraska alive. You can count on that."

Actually, Allen is used to Hartung's declarations.

"He's a goon. He does that all the time," Allen says. "He's told some people he's going to Cal-Berkeley. He's told others he's going to Penn State. I've never asked him if he's coming here. I just assume it."

Allen assumes Hartung will become a Cornhusker because he's told virtually every member of the team that.

"He tries to think he might go somewhere else, but he won't," Allen says. "Last weekend, he was wearing a Nebraska gymnastics hat around here in the Big Eight Invitational. It really miffed the Oklahoma coach."

Oklahoma coach Paul Ziert, who coached OU to the 1977 NCAA championship, touts Hartung as the best prep gymnast in the country. He also believes South's pride and joy will become a Sooner.

"I suppose there's always that possibility," Allen concedes, "but I can't see any way. Hartung says he likes the Oklahoma coach, but he doesn't. They try to get along, but don't."

Hartung isn't as flakey as he might seem. He's a straight-A student in school and a model athlete who has never even considered breaking training in any way.

"He's going to be one of this country's best athletes," Allen predicts, "and we're not going to let him leave this state."

Hartung has as much respect for Allen's program as Allen has for his talents.

"I think Nebraska has the best coaching staff in the country," he says. "Some schools have one outstanding coach. Nebraska has three (Allen, Jim Howard and Seymour Rifkind)."

South gymnastics coach Rich Beran chuckles when he hears that Hartung ranks Oklahoma and New Mexico 1-2 on his collegiate possibilities.

"I don't believe him," Beran says. "He's leaning toward Nebraska. He likes their program and coaching staff. The decision just isn't in the bag. He'd like to become more familiar with some other programs.

"More than anything, though, I think he said that just to test Francis Allen's sense of humor," Beran says. "He likes to joke around like that and act like he's serious."

Hartung will be serious when the competition starts. "He may throw a new stunt or two in the meet," Beran says, "but he wants to go out like he came in — in style."

Hartung is a dominating gymnast. Last year, he won state gold medals in vaulting, rings, floor exercise, parallel bars and horizontal bars.

What he doesn't win, junior teammate Phil Cahoy does win. Last year, Cahoy won the pommel horse and finished second in the all-around competition.

Staff photo

Omaha South's Jim Hartung likes to kid around, but on the side horse and in other events, he's all business.

Cahoy has beaten Hartung for all-around honors three times this season. "They're both amazing," Beran says. "Phil may have the edge on the p-bars and the high bar and they're close on the pommel, but Jim should have the edge everywhere else."

There is, however, one other defending champion in this year's state meet field. Omaha North's Larry Bushon will defend his title on the trampoline.

Ten teams have qualified to compete for the team championship with South the heavy duty favorite. Other qualifiers are Omaha Burke, Omaha Northwest, Creighton Prep, Lincoln East, Lincoln Northeast, Millard, North Platte, Grand Island and Papillion.

A change in the state meet format should make this year's championships more exciting and dramatic.

Previously, the team champion and all-around champion were decided after the first day's competition. This year, two-day totals will determine both team and individual championships.

Parking is available on the north side of the Sports Complex. Fans are asked to enter at the north and west set of doors. Admission is $2.50.

It may be a fan's last chance to see Hartung compete as a Nebraskan.

That is, if you refuse to believe Francis Allen.

KU welcomes tackle King

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — The return of defensive tackle Franklin King highlighted the Kansas football practice Wednesday in the bitter cold at Memorial Stadium.

King, a junior and a three-year starter, strained ligaments in his right knee in the Iowa State game two weeks ago, and at the time it was thought that he would be out for the season.

But he could be in the Jayhawks' starting lineup Saturday when they square off against 12th-ranked Nebraska.

"Franklin sure has started a lot of games around here," said Coach Bud Moore, discussing the possibility of King's starting. "He was moving around pretty good today."

Others coming off the injury list were starting offensive guard Mike Gay and reserve linebacker James Jackson.

Playoff tickets sold at LSE

Lincoln Southeast athletic director Bill Miller says tickets to Friday night's state Class A football championship will be sold at Southeast's main office from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Miller indicated eight Southeast buses are scheduled for the trip to the state title game against Creighton Prep.

Southeast fans are asked to sit in the East Stadium at UNO's Al Caniglia Field, located at 60th and Dodge Sts.

Roots at base of their pride

Prep Panorama

By Randy York

With roots such a popular contemporary subject, it's easy to see the pride of the defensive leaders for Class A football finalists Lincoln Southeast and Creighton Prep.

Southeast middle guard Felix White III and Prep linebacker Tata Machado understand the drive within themselves to excel.

White, an Indian, is the son of Nebraska State Indian Commissioner Felix White Jr. Machado's father, Gerardo, is Cuban and his mother, Grace, is Mexican.

Is it sheer coincidence those two are the leading candidates for the Sunday Journal and Star Defensive Player of the Year award and may well decide the issue on the field Friday night at UNO?

Both athletes have heard enough in their family backgrounds to know when to buckle down and get tough in a very physical sport.

Tata's father was a member of the Cuban Army which fought against Castro's rise to power. He now teaches Spanish at Prep and Tata (pronounced Tah'-tuh) has had the luxury of a Class A athletic situation throughout his career.

Felix made a rather shocking transition into big school football after eight-man competition his sophomore year at Winnebago.

"He was a little in awe of things last year," Southeast head coach Frank Solich says. "Consequently, he was inconsistent. This year, he's found the consistency to be a super player.

"What makes Felix is he honestly goes 100% every time the football is snapped," Solich says. "Put that together with his size, strength and quickness and it doesn't surprise me that other coaches are as impressed as they are."

Felix is 6-3, 215 and already the recipient of a Nebraska football scholarship. At 5-11 and 191, Tata doesn't have as many natural physical capabilities as White.

But that's where the differences end. He's also an athlete who plays out every play to the optimum.

"Unless he's diving to make a tackle, you can almost count on Tata hitting you right in the middle of the numbers," Prep coach Tom Jaworski says.

"He tackles like you would diagram them. He never drops his head. He just sticks a guy, stands him straight up, knocks him back and puts him on the ground. He's not the biggest defensive player on the field, but everyone knows when he's hit them."

Omaha Westside's Dan Young is among the coaches saying Machado was the best player seen all season. Why? "Because he's all over the field during the entire game," Young says.

Fremont's Jack Bryant is among the coaches saying White was the best player seen all season. "Being strong, quick and tough, he has the lateral movement to make tackles from sideline to sideline," Bryant says.

When the helmet and pads come off after a game, White and Machado change character. They are quiet, reserved, unassuming, respectful.

They are leaders because their teams always come first.

"You don't come across too many like Tata," Jaworski says. "He's devastating on the field, but when he comes off it, he's one of the nicest young men we have in school."

Solich can say the same about Felix, who lived with the Southeast coach for six weeks last year while his father worked out some moving problems.

The best thing about both athletes is that winning or losing isn't going to change their coaches' minds about them Friday night.

They'll both walk off the field winners.

Frazier set to return to ring warfare

New York (UPI) — Former world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier is all but set for a $1 million nationally televised comeback fight against fourth-ranked slugger Earnie Shavers in February, according to promoter Bob Arum of Top Rank, Inc.

"We'll know all the details later today or within the next couple of days," Arum said Wednesday. "We're still talking to the networks."

Frazier, his singing career somewhat stalled, is anxious to return to the ring for the first time since his fifth round non-title kayo by George Foreman 17 months ago. He has reportedly been working hard in his Philadelphia gym and is around 221 pounds, about 10 more than his prime fighting weight.

"He feels he can take Shavers," said Butch Lewis, Arum's partner. "And he thinks it would lead to a fourth fight with Muhammad Ali. Joe wants Ali bad."

Frazier will be going against the advice of nearly everyone around him if he returns to fighting.

Eddie Burns: Nebraska's magnificent Don Quixote

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Eddie Burns has been too busy studying football playbooks the past five years to read about Don Quixote. Still, he knows all about impossible dreams.

And like the magnificent Mr. Quixote, Eddie Burns is about to realize his dream is, alas, probably impossible. That realization will arrive Saturday when Nebraska closes out its home season against Kansas.

Burns, the Omaha Rummel product, will be one of 23 seniors who will be making their final appearance in a Cornhusker uniform at Memorial Stadium.

Unlike Quixote, Burns won't be attacking windmills. Instead, he'll be sitting on the Nebraska bench, viewing the game from the sideline.

It's certainly not where he'd prefer to be. He'd rather jump on his horse, strap on his helmet and be the starting quarterback against the Jayhawks. That's Eddie's dream — to be the Huskers' No. 1 man.

Eddie Burns
. . . to end NU career

But that's impossible. Burns has spent more time on the bench than a Supreme Court justice. And that's where he'll be Saturday, watching starter Randy Garcia direct the Husker offense.

Many people wonder why a fellow like Burns sticks it out. He could have chucked the whole program a couple years ago and the biggest of Big Red fans would have understood.

So why does he do it? Following Wednesday's bitter-cold practice — a day he could have spent in the warm confines of his home with his wife and three children — Eddie Burns gave an answer that would have brought life to the fictional Quixote.

"I'm not a quitter," Burns said as he leaned against his locker, thawing his numb fingers. "There's a lot of tough situations in life when it would be easy to quit. Football, school, life . . . easy to quit all of those.

"But I'm proud I stuck it out. This team has a lot of unity, and I'd like to think some of us five-year players — with our experience — have something to do with that."

Back in August, this looked like Burns' year. With the quarterback spot a muddled mess among five players, he figured to have a shot at the top. A slim shot to be sure, but more of a chance than ever before.

But by September, Garcia and Tom Sorley had laid claim to the starting job. It's position they've shared all season while

Calling all wildlife

Jim Olt of Pekin, Ill., makes game calls. There's an Olt call for nearly every season and nearly every game animal. But there's a trick to it all, too.

It's called, learning how to call a call. "To be perfectly honest about it, calls are the best conservation tool going," Olt said with a laugh. "Actually, anybody can learn how to call and call well. It takes time and practice."

There are a couple of helpful hints along the way, however.

"The first thing I'd recommend is to get a record or, best of all, get with a good caller," Olt said. "The most important thing about calling is being able to hear what a call is supposed to sound like. If you don't know, there's no sense in calling.

Jim Olt

"Practice is the second most important thing," he added. "Getting in shape to call is another. You'd be surprised how dizzy and tired you can become after a day of calling. The finer points of calling come from experience. That's where a good caller can sometimes help make a difference.

"Often it's not that callers sound that much better than other callers, but knowing when to call and when to quit is sometimes the key to getting birds to come to you," Olt said.

. . . anybody can learn

Olt indicated a little fisherman in every caller might do him or her some good.

"Fishermen know if something doesn't work, try something else. The same goes for calling ducks and geese. If one rhythm doesn't work, try something else. You might try slower or faster. Or you might try softer or not calling at all. Overcalling is one of the greatest faults."

Other tricks of trade

Olt noted there are other tricks which work for duck and goose callers. One is the use of a pintail decoy or two, plus the pintail whistle call.

"Hunters are finding out the pintail whistle is a very effective mallard call," he said. "The pintail is a very wary bird and mallards know this. I think they figure if a sprig (pintail decoy) or two is in with a mallard decoy set, it must be pretty safe."

Olt also indicated certain areas of the country have different calling techniques involved which make calling more effective.

"The basics are true most places," said Olt, "but most of the areas take a little trial and error to find the proper rhythm and sounds that work in that part of the country.

"Certain calls sometimes make the difference in that some are more adaptable to how much air you can put out through them. Big water, for instance, like the Hudson Bay area or big lakes take a double reed call best so you can give it more air and create more volume.

"Some guys try 30 different calls before they get one that works best for them but often you can adjust yourself or the call better than trying that many different models or brands.

"Still, the best thing for a caller to do is practice. Learn the proper sounds from a record or a good caller and put them to use in the field," said Olt. "If you still can't do it, the next best thing is keep quiet."

DeBaere brothers highlight smoker

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

The fact the DeBaere brothers have to travel around to find sparring partners has helped the small Burlington Northern boxing team coached by Don Campbell and Rodger DeBaere Sr., become a powerhouse in Lincoln boxing.

Rodger Jr., a 16-year-old Lincoln Northeast junior who placed second in last year's Southeast District championships, and younger brother Larry, a 15-year-old sophomore, each scored impressive wins Wednesday night in the season-opening boxing smoker at Pershing Auditorium.

Rodger, Jr., gained a unanimous decision over Nebraska Boxing Club fighter Marc Clough, while Larry DeBaere scored a technical knockout over Joe Brandon of the House of Shears team at 1:40 in the third round of a three-round fight.

"I was worried by Clough because he's in such good shape and he's such a wild fighter," said Rodger. "I'd seen him fight before and you just have to stay away from those sweeping punches or you'll get hurt."

Rodger DeBaere managed to put Clough on the ropes with two solid right hooks after Clough landed two long, straight rights in the early going of the first round.

But each time DeBaere finessed his way into scoring on a couple of jabs and more right hooks, Clough would battle his way back with right uppercuts and roundhouse punches.

Clough's flurry finally left him open, though, in the third round when DeBaere landed a whopping right hook as Clough was backing up to regain his balance.

Larry DeBaere counted on combinations to Brandon's head and finally left the House of Shears boxing taking a standing eight-count after scoring on three right uppercuts to Brandon's chin, in the second round.

DeBaere landed four more combinations early in the third round and referee Larry Emery stopped the fight midway through the third round.

"You can't go in for the kill on guys that swing so wildly," said Rodger. "Larry had the same problem. We both have learned to just keep away with the jab and try to work on the other guy in the later rounds when they get tired from swinging."

"We don't practice against each other though and since there aren't too many people our size (Larry is 141-pounds and Rodger weighs 152) we have to travel around to the other clubs practicing and sparring with anybody around," said Rodger. "Sometimes that means fighting guys 20 or 30 pounds heavier than we are."

Other winners Wednesday night before the crowd of 400 were Dave Brownless of Omaha over UNL's Tom Coyne; Gary Cuellar of the House of Shears over Marlin Hawley; Gregg Pietz of the UNL club over Aaron Gruber and Rick Lippert of Columbus over Kevin Siebert.

Seven exhibitions were staged with five-time Midwest champion Roger Pelster facing Carlos Santistevan and five-year-old Tony Menefee, son of five-time Southeast champion Ray, facing Paul Hall of Columbus in a 50-pound match.

The next smoker is slated for Nov. 30 at Pershing.

Burns

Burns has been listed as the No. 3 quarterback.

While he's made all of the road trips, Burns has played very little. Because he usually comes in when the game is in hand and he has to keep the wraps on things, he's only thrown one pass, good for a 25-yard gain.

"After the first three or four weeks of practice I could see the handwriting on the wall," Burns recalled of his lost battle for the starting job. "I was depressed. But I've been through it so many times before I knew how to handle it."

He insists there has been no thoughts of quitting. But as he has stood on the sidelines he hasn't been able to suppress the thoughts of what might have been.

Burns chuckled quietly and said, "sure I think what might have happened if I had gone to a smaller school. Or had played basketball (he was all-state in that, also). But it doesn't do any good to look back. Really, I'm happy."

His teammates are happy he's around. Sorley, one of the quarterbacks who beat Burns out, looked admiringly at his fellow competitor and spoke of his respect for the diligent Burns.

"He's been such a great help to me, especially when I was younger," Sorley said. "Eddie has such a great attitude toward life. It's the type of attitude people should pattern their lives after."

Because Sorley suffered bruised ribs against Missouri last week, he won't be able to play this week against Kansas. That means Burns moves up to the No. 2 spot.

Should something happen to Garcia, or if Randy has a bad day . . . "I guess it's never too late," Eddie Burns said, that impossible dream dancing in his head.

Injury gives Wortman start

St. Louis (AP) — All-pro offensive tackle Dan Dierdorf, slowed by a fractured jaw, is listed as doubtful by the St. Louis Cardinals for Monday night's game against Dallas.

Six-year veteran Keith Wortman of Nebraska is expected to start in Dierdorf's spot.

A 'silent' prayer boosts Southeast

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln attorney Jim Hewitt was to lead the scripture reading for last Sunday's 11 o'clock service at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Standing in the foyer, he approached the Rev. Dr. Bob Palmer. "I suppose it would be inappropriate to say a prayer for Southeast," Hewitt remarked, knowing the answer.

Palmer told him a public prayer would be inappropriate, but a silent prayer would be apropos.

Hewitt followed his minister's advice . . . to a certain point. "I will confine myself to reading the scriptures this morning," he told the congregation, "since it would be inappropriate to say a prayer for Southeast."

Hewitt has more than passing interest in Southeast's state championship football showdown with Creighton Prep Friday night at Omaha. His son, John, is a starting defensive end for the Knights.

Last year, older brother Will Hewitt was a driving force and inspirational leader on Southeast's state championship team.

Papa Hewitt, who has spent most of this season on the sidelines taking color slides as a pictoral record for Frank Solich, has learned to respect the Southeast coach's ability to produce.

"He has an uncanny knack of inspiring his players," Hewitt said. "He seems so shy and quiet, but that ends in the locker room. Before the Lincoln High game this year, I was standing 30 yards away and I could hear him through the walls. He really gets his players ready to play."

Steelers beset by problems

By United Press International

A big part of the Pittsburgh Steelers' season so far, as noticeable as their gold pants, black helmets and fearsome defense, has been problems. One after another.

Every week it seems another Steeler is jumping the team or fumbling the football or throwing an interception or blasting officials. Together they are losing games, including the last two to drop their record to 4-4.

But Cleveland Coach Forrest Gregg, who remembers what happened to the Steelers last year, hopes his team isn't being fooled.

"Let me just say this about Pittsburgh," said Gregg, whose Browns travel to Pittsburgh Sunday. "They have a great team with great talent and they've been in tough situations before.

"No matter what their internal problems are, if they do have them, they will be forgotten Sunday when the game starts."

The Browns, 5-3, will be trying to hold onto a one-game lead in the AFC Central Division over Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Houston, each with 4-4 records.

The Steelers are troubled not only by turnovers and injuries, but also discontent. Veteran safety Glen Edwards became the latest Steeler to return to the team after leaving because of a contract dispute. Edwards returned this week after a five-day walkout, joining Jack Lambert, Mel Blount, Ernie Holmes and Jimmy Allen as Steelers this year who have left and come back.

The Browns, happy, healthy and eager, are coming off a 10-7 defeat to Cincinnati and have never won in seven tries at Pittsburgh's Three Ribers Stadium. The Browns also suffered a 28-14 loss to Pittsburgh at Cleveland Oct. 2. Gregg also recalls the Steelers were 1-4 last season, then won their last nine games.

"It's a must game or us," Cleveland tackle Doug Dieken said. "We have to win as bad as they do. It's gonna come down to the question of how bad you want it."

The Steelers, who won't have injured middle linebacker Lambert back for three or four more weeks, may also be without their starting defensive ends against Cleveland. L.C. Greenwood and John Banaszak both are listed as questionable with injuries suffered in last week's defeat at Denver.

"People around here get pretty excited about the so-called 'Turnpike' rivalry, no matter where the games are played," Cleveland defensive tackle Jerry Sherk said. "The two cities are so close (125 miles apart) that a lot of people from both towns know each other. It's usually a pretty wild affair when we play. After last week's loss, this would be a great opportunity to put two games between Pittsburgh and ourselves and allow us to take charge of the division again."

In other games Sunday, Baltimore is at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Minnesota, Denver at San Diego, Detroit at Atlanta, Houston at Oakland, Kansas City at Chicago, Los Angeles at Green Bay, New England at Miami, the New York Giants at Tampa Bay, San Francisco at New Orleans, Seattle at the New York Jets and Washington at Philadelphia.

Unbeaten Dallas hosts St. Louis Monday night.

Victories for Houston and Cincinnati, who visit last season's Super Bowl teams, could throw the AFC Central into a four-way tie if Pittsburgh beats Cleveland.

BYU receivers the unsung stars

Provo, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young is the No. 1 college football passing team in the country, and quarterbacks Gifford Nielsen and Marc Wilson have gained national attention. But can you name the BYU receivers?

Most people can't, mainly because there are so many of them.

The faceless receiving corps has been just as consistent this season as the quarterbacks. In eight games, 14 different receivers have caught two or more passes, and six of them have grabbed at least 21 aerials.

They aren't on the field all the time, since Coach LaVell Edwards and offensive coordinator Doug Scovil use a system of rotating receivers to carry in the plays that are called from the sideline.

"I can't imagine our receivers being any better than they are," says Wilson, a sophomore who replaced the injured Nielsen in the fifth game of the season and has been named the Associated Press national Back of the Week on two occasions.

"If I get the ball within five yards of them, I know they'll catch it," added Wilson.

The elder statesman of the group is senior John VanDerWouden, who has been a varsity team member for four years. He leads the team with 35 catches.

"We're a cohesive unit, and there is no jealousy among us," says VanDerWouden. "We play as a team.

"Our offense is sophisticated in that we have so many different patterns. Out of five formations we can run over 60 plays each, which means 300 plays to defense against. You have to grow into Scovil's system slowly because it's so complicated. He tells us, 'Catch the near impossible every time, the impossible every other time.'"

NCAA ruling hit

New York (AP) — Edward G. Williams, a leading adviser to the U.S. Olympic Committee, Wednesday denounced a ruling by the National Collegiate Athletic Association which prohibited four Mission Viejo, Calif., swimmers from participating in a training tour of the Soviet Union.

"Despite the assistance of senators Ted Stevens of Alaska, Richard Stone of Florida and John Culver of Iowa, we have been unable to reverse this NCAA ruling and the four swimmers will not make the trip," said Williams, chairman of the Athletes Advisory Council of the USOC.

He added: "Our position is it should be the athletes together with his or her coach who make the determination as to whether a person should particpate in an international exchange situation. It should not be the NCAA, or a federation of high schools, whose only interests are to hold the athlete for their own scheduled events. Academic interests, not self-serving athletic interests of the NCAA or the high school federations should be the determining factors."

Last Thursday the NCAA ruled against the tour on the grounds that it violates NCAA regulations with respect to athletic competition outside the collegiate calendar.

Kearney State ranked sixth

Kearney State is rated sixth in the latest NAIA Division I football poll with 144 points. Southwest Oklahoma leads with 236 points.

Chadron State finished 11th in the final Division II poll with 82 points. Westminster, Pa., took the top spot with 235 points.

She wants Olympics marathon

Los Angeles (UPI) — By 1984, Miki Gorman, now 42, doesn't figure to be running marathons any longer. At least not competitively.

But she's thinking that far ahead.

She fervently hopes something can be done to add the marathon as a women's track event in seven years when Los Angeles probably will hold the Summer Olympic Games.

In fact, she'd like to see women's 5,000-meter and 10,000-meter races added, too.

A two-time winner of both the Boston and New York marathons, including each of them this year, the 5-foot-1, 89-pounder feels strongly that the longest Olympic distance event for women is 1,500 meters.

And, that women's race was only added to the Games in 1972. Before that, the 800-meter run was the longest women's race.

"There are so many great American women distance runners with no place to go," she says.

Gorman is one of amateur sport's truly intriguing stories. She was born in China in 1935, the daughter of a Japanese surgeon who became an army doctor in Japanese-occupied provinces of China.

After World War II, she worked as a babysitter for a U.S. Army colonel's family and the family sponsored her coming to the United States in 1964.

At 28, she arrived in Carlisle, Pa., and took a secretarial course and then moved to Los Angeles where she became a secretary for a Japanese trading company.

Six months after meeting Mike Gorman, a Los Angeles stockbroker, at a dance, the couple was married.

In 1969, at 33, she began running with her husband — the first running of her life — at LACC. She ran her first marathon four years later at Palos Verdes, Calif., and won. There have been nine official 26-mile marathons since. Unofficially, there have been many others that she hasn't kept count of.

Gorman did take time out from her training long enough to have a daughter, Danielle, now almost 3. But she was back running one week after the birth and she hasn't stopped running.

She trains 60 to 70 miles a week and does 90 to 120 miles for six weeks before a marathon.

"Sometimes," she laughed, "I wonder what kind of runner I would be if I had started earlier."

Irish, 'Horns cotton pickers?

Dallas (UPI) — Cotton Bowl representatives will make their seventh trip of the season to a Notre Dame game Saturday and with only a little more than a week remaining before the bowl selection date only the possibility of an upset appears to be standing in the way of a Fighting Irish trip to Dallas.

Both Sugar and Orange Bowl officials, meanwhile, will attend Saturday's game between Texas A&M and Arkansas in College Station. And if Arkansas should beat the Aggies, the Razorbacks would then apparently become a prime target of both bowls.

Bowl selection date is Nov. 19 and barring a loss by either No. 1 Texas or Notre Dame, the Irish will be issued an invitation to the Cotton Bowl immediately after their contest with Air Force.

And Notre Dame is expected to accept.

This week Cotton Bowl representatives will visit the Notre Dame-Clemson game at Clemson, S.C., and the Ohio State-Indiana contest at Bloomington, Ind.

"We've visited both Penn State and Pittsburgh before so the fact that we won't see them this week should not any way infer that they are out of the picture," a Cotton Bowl spokesman said Wednesday.

Since Texas defeated both Oklahoma and Arkansas at midseason, a matchup between the No. 1 Longhorns and Notre Dame has been an obvious bet.

And if Texas beats TCU and Baylor as expected and the Irish handle Clemson and Air force as expected the Cotton Bowl will continue to be in position to put on the top college game of the holiday season.

Notre Dame, however, will have to accept the Cotton Bowl bid before Texas meets once-beaten Texas A&M on Thanksgiving weekend.

The once beaten Arkansas Razorbacks and Texas A&M Aggies are also attractive bowl teams and Saturday's Arkansas-Texas A&M game has become a mecca for bowl scouts. There will be eight bowls represented at the game.

And if Arkansas should beat the Aggies, the Razorbacks will apparently become a leading contender for either the Sugar or Orange bowls.

Some Arkansas backers indicated last week they did not think they were all that popular with the Sugar Bowl because they felt Alabama Coach Bear Bryant did not want to play the Razorbacks.

But one source close to the bowl picture indicated this week that Bryant did not care who his team faced and that if Arkansas wins Saturday the Razorbacks will be the top team on both the Orange and Sugar Bowl lists.

'84 Games vote sought

Los Angeles (UPI) — The voters should have an opportunity to forbid the city government to spend any money to stage the 1984 Olympic Games, city councilman Ernani Bernardi said Tuesday.

Bernardi said he will try to put a proposal on the ballot in the election next June, which, if passed, would write such a ban into the city charter.

He has asked the city attorney's office for advice on how such a ban should be worded.

Bernardi would have to get a majority of the other members of the council to side with him to put such a measure on the ballot, or else go through the lengthier process of obtaining enough voters' signatures on petitions.

Although the international olympic committee will not choose a host city for the 1984 Games until its meeting in May, Los Angeles was the only city to offer to hold them and the bidding has been closed.

Mayor Tom Bradley and the committee pushing to obtain the Games have promised "spartan, no frills games" that will cost the city's taxpayers nothing. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., has promised that "not a penny" of state money will be spent on the Olympics.

Bernardi noted that "there seems to be almost unanimous agreement, even among the games' most fervent supporters," that no tax money should be spent.

Atokad cancels

South Sioux City, Neb. (AP) — Blizzard conditions forced the cancellation of Atokad's scheduled horse racing program Wednesday.

A track spokesman said there was "no way" the eight-race program could have been run because of snow, low temperatures and winds gusting to more than 60 m.p.h.

Nets not ready to panic

Piscatatay, N.J. (AP) — Win or lose, with Julius Erving or without, the Nets couldn't draw fans in Long Island. So the National Basketball Association franchise moved to New Jersey, the land of promise for professional sports, and is doing even worse.

But management says things have to get better.

"Sure we're a little disappointed over the attendance and the the team's record (1-7), but things are going to get better," said Ted Pase, chief spokesman for owner Roy Boe. "Once the team wins a few games, things will pick up."

In an interview Wednesday, Pase said in five home games so far this season at the 8,500-seat Rutgers Athletic Center here, the Nets have drawn 27,760 fans, an average of 5,550 per game. They had hoped for 7,000 to 7,500.

The Nets left the Nassau Coliseum last year after drawing only 6,420 per game. The year before, when they won the ABA championship with "Dr. J" they played before crowds averaging 7,200.

"We've always lost money, but this year we're hoping to lose as little as possible," Pase said. "But I would say we'd have to average 7,000 a game to make it in New Jersey."

Bunz cares, and pro scouts like him more for it

Los Angeles (UPI) — Dan Bunz, Long Beach State's splendid linebacker with a professional future, didn't feel like having his usual postgame beer with a few teammates last Saturday night.

The pro scouts who have been ogling him all fall would have been proud.

"I was really, really upset," he stressed. "I just didn't feel like doing anything except going home and pulling the sheets over my head. I didn't want to talk to nobody."

Despite the marvelous talents of the 6-foot-3-½, 228-pounder, the 49ers are in the midst of a four-game losing streak after a 3-0 start.

In a 23-14 loss to Pacific Coast Athletic Association leader Fresno State, Bunz made 21 tackles, 10 of which were unassisted. The Bulldogs went into the game averaging 435 total yards and were held to 271.

After seven games, he has 122 tackles, a blocked punt and a blocked extra point. That's almost twice as many tackles as any other player on the 49ers.

"Dan is amazing," said first-year Long Beach State Coach Dave Currey. "He's a senior and a three-year starter. We're losing and it would be easy for him to coast in but that's not his nature. Believe me, his stock has gone up because of the way he's played under adversity."

"This is the first time in my life," said Bunz, "that I've lost like this. I've never lost four in a row before and it's no fun. It really eats at you.

"But I'm not a quitter. We still have three more games left. They're against tough teams but we can win them all. If we do, I'll take a 6-4 season. I'd consider that a good season."

Bunz was recruited by three Pacific-8 schools — UCLA, Stanford and California — out of Oakmont High School in Roseville, Calif. But he chose UC Riverside, where an older brother, Ben, had been an offensive tackle, to play under Wayne Howard.

He started at Riverside as a freshman and transferred to Long Beach State when Howard became its head coach in 1974.

After redshirting in 1974, Bunz was the leading tackler on a 9-2 49ers' team as a sophomore with 135 tackles and, in his junior season, had 141 tackles as Long Beach State went 8-3.

Currey, a former Stanford assistant, replaced Howard this season after Howard resigned to become the head coach at Utah.

Before the season began, the general consensus of pro scouts who talked to Currey and his staff was that Bunz, who can run the 40-yard dash in 4.7 seconds and bench press 425 pounds, was likely to be chosen in the first or second round of the draft — depending on his senior season.

Since he is having such a strong year, it's felt there is a good chance he'll be a No. 1 selection.

"I'd love to be picked in the first round," said Bunz. "Who wouldn't? But I don't really know what's going to happen. Really, unless you're an O.J. Simpson, it's pretty hard sometimes to figure out what's going on."

Long Beach State will complete its season, in order, at San Diego State, 7-1, Saturday night; at Brigham Young, 7-1, Nov. 19, and at home against Bowling Green, 4-5, Nov. 26.

"Right now," confessed Bunz, "our morale is down a little. But a win over San Diego State would really get us going again."

Baseball hall of famer Harris dies

Bethesda, Md. (UPI) — Stanley R. "Bucky" Harris, who managed five major league baseball teams during a long baseball career and was chosen to the hall of fame, died Tuesday night on his 81st birthday after a long illness.

His body will be cremated and a private service held in Pittston, Pa.

Harris first rose to prominence in the baseball world as the 27-year-old "boy manager" who led the Washington Senators to their first American League pennants in 1924 and 1925.

His achievements as a player and manager over a career that spanned more than half a century gained him entry to the Baseball Hall of Fame in February, 1975.

Elected to Cooperstown by a vote of the special Old Timers' committee, the 78 - year - old Harris said from the nursing home where he spent his final years: "I was hoping the phone would ring for me."

As a fiery second baseman and team leader, Harris played with or against many of the stars who preceded him into the Hall of Fame and, as a manager of five major league clubs for a total of 29 years, he helped develop others who have been enshrined in Cooperstown.

Three of his managing stints were at the helm of the Senators, adding up to 18 seasons.

His other managing jobs were with the Detroit Tigers,

Bucky Harris
. . . managed 5 teams

the Philadelphia Phillies, the New York Yankees, where he won another pennant, and the Boston Red Sox. Bucky also served as general manager of the Red Sox in 1959 and 1960 and had minor league managing posts in Buffalo and San Diego.

As a player out of the coal mine region around Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Bucky was a combative, rough-and-tumble competitor. Off the field, he was a soft-spoken, placid-tempered individual who wooed and married the daughter of a U.S. senator, the former Elizabeth Sutherland.

Storm delays NU gals' trip

Onawa, Ia. — The early winter snowstorm has temporarily halted the Nebraska women's basketball team's trip to Winnepeg, Canada, where they are scheduled to play two weekend games.

The Lady Huskers, traveling by van, ran into some rough weather near Whiting and will be forced to spend the night in the Onawa High School gymnasium. Onawa is about 35 miles south of Sioux City.

Canadian Mounties' acts of tampering told

(c) New York Times

Ottawa — The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have opened and copied personal mail illegally since 1954 in a program known as Operation Cathedral, Solicitor General Francis Fox told the House of Commons Wednesday.

Fox, the cabinet minister in charge of law enforcement, said the confirmation of the mail tampering contradicted repeated denials by senior police officers when he had raised the question last summer in connection with a special inquiry into allegations of other unlawful activity by the agency's security unit.

Fox stated that the information, which he said had been obtained from senior officers of the mounted police, had been turned over to justice Ministry and Attorney General Ronald Basford, and to a royal commission investigating the earlier charges. Basford's department would be in charge of any prosecution arising from the police actions.

Tampering with personal mail is unlawful under two statutes, the Post Office Act and the Official Secrets Act, as well as postal regulations, Fox stated.

The disclosures affecting the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, whose functions are similar to those of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States, recalled similar charges against the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, in rebuffing demands were for Canadian legislation similar to the Freedoms of Information Act in the United States, had maintained earlier that such a law was unnecessary here because police irregularities of that nature had not occurred in Canada.

Fox said that all of the mail opening had been done as part of the security unit's efforts to counter subversion, espionage or terrorism. In some instances, he stated, letters had been copied, resealed and returned to the postal system for delivery to the addressees.

The story of mail tampering by the Mounties was broken in a news broadcast Tuesday night by CBC-TV, the television network of the government-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Fox made the admissions in response to a query by Elmer Mackay, a Progressive Conservative member of the House of Commons from Nova Scotia, during the daily parliamentary question hour on Wednesday.

An electronic eavesdropping device had been found concealed in a chair in Mackay's parliamentary office 10 days ago. Speaker of the House James A. Jerome announced Wednesday that Ottawa police have been called in to investigate the incident.

Joseph Clark, also of the Progressive Conservative Party and the official leader of the Opposition in the House, reported last Monday that a private electronics expert had identified a listening device installed in a telephone in a conference of his parliamentary office.

Queen is given $522,000 raise

London (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth got a $522,000-per-year pay raise Wednesday and a top labor union official said it would make Britain's hard-pressed workers "all a bit more bloody-minded."

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey announced the increase in the queen's pay to irate members of Parliament at a time when the government is trying to force all other British workers to keep their pay hike demands to 10 percent.

Scar, speech are memories of accident

Scottsdale, Ariz. (AP) — Five months ago, 14-year-old Kathy Miller was hit by a car. She suffered a broken leg and brain damage and went into a 10-week coma.

When she awoke, she had forgotten who she was and how to read, write, chew and walk.

"When she came home, she could only crawl and point to her mouth when she wanted something to eat," said Kathy's mother, Barbara Miller. "She was like an infant."

But now a scar on her right leg and her slow, deliberate speech are the only reminders of Kathy's accident.

Last Sunday she ran with her parents in a 10,000-meter race (6.2 miles) along a canal bank in nearby Tempe.

"I didn't know where I was or why I was in the hospital," Kathy said in an interview after the race. "I don't remember anything about it. The doctors said it may come back but I hope it doesn't."

When she came home from the hospital, Kathy's mother and father, Larry Miller, tried to reteach her everything she knew.

"It took her about three or four weeks to respond after she came out of the coma," Mrs. Miller said. "Then we started teaching her to parrot words and then sentences.

"At the same time, we were teaching her how to talk. It took her about five or six weeks after she got home from the hospital to learn that."

Kathy said, "Everything was hard to learn," but her mother said it has been exciting as well.

"We'll be traveling down a road and she'll point out some place and tell me that she just remembered something she did there," Mrs. Miller said. "I've found out all kinds of things that I never knew about."

A high school freshman, Kathy generally earns B's and C's.

Mrs. Miller said she spoke with Kathy's doctor Wednesday, and "as far as actual recovery, it will be a period of years before we have the full story. But her progress has been phenomenal."

Miller, a major league baseball pitcher for three years in the 1960s, recalled Kathy's first word when she recovered from the coma — "Mommy." He also recalled her first sentence.

"I was sitting out in the backyard with Kathy, who was in a wheelchair at the time, and she said, 'All I need is time,' " Miller said. "I thought that it was God speaking to me through her."

REMEMBER LAST WINTER?

To keep heating bills as low as possible this winter, consider upgrading your insulation.

If you plan changes to your present home, or buying a new one, put insulation at the top of your checklist. Much energy is unnecessarily wasted because homes are not properly constructed to minimize heat loss. If you are building a new home or adding on to your present one, you will have a better opportunity to control the efficiency of the structure.

This is one area to consider "first costs" instead of just operating costs. Although it might cost more money initially to put more and better insulating devices in, you will probably save money over the years you live there.

If you're buying an already finished home, it would be wise to check that its insulation meets or exceeds the Minimum Property Standards (MPS) of the Federal Housing Administration.

Protective insulation to prevent heat loss can also be obtained through the installation of weatherstripping around doors and caulking or sealing the frames of windows or doors. This will keep out cold air and reduce the loss of warm air. This type of unchecked air leakage increases your family's heating bill about 15-30 percent and unnecessarily causes energy waste. If storm windows or insulating glass are installed, half of the heat loss through windows will be cut and more personal comfort provided. Heating bills will also be reduced.

See the Energy Conservation Display now in the Lobby of the National Bank of Commerce.

'Ballad of Bert' is a new record

Calhoun, Ga. (AP) — It may not rival Tammy Wynette's "Stand by Your Man" in the charts, but the "Ballad of Bert" has been released.

The record, produced by Sugar Valley Productions of Calhoun, traces former federal Budget Director Bert Lance's rise from a small town banker "tryin' to aid his neighbors," to a stint in state government, when he "showed those city slickers how," to when he was director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Singer-songwriter Wright Johnson of Calhoun said he decided the rest of the nation should be told about the town's affection for Lance.

Dow Ind. +2.16

New York (AP) — A wave of buying just before the close enabled the stock market to post a moderate gain Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, on the minus side from early in the session through as late as a half hour before the close, wound up with a 2.16 gain at 818.43.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 9-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite common-stock index picked up .26 to 818.43.

Analysts found little evidence of a strong response, either positive or negative, to comments by Arthur Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, before the Senate Banking Committee.

Burns defended the Fed's moves in recent months to tighten credit, arguing that inflation fears would have mounted strongly had the central bank not acted to restrain monetary growth.

He said the Fed had slightly reduced its target growth rates for two broader measures of the money supply—known as M2 and M3—while keeping its target for the basic measure, M1, unchanged.

Some brokers added, however, that the market seemed to benefit from a strong showing by the dollar in foreign exchange markets, which was attributed to Burns' continued stress on monetary policies aimed at curbing inflation.

The late upswing, in addition, came as brokers were about to begin an offering of 12 million new shares of American Telephone & Telegraph, the nation's most widely held stock.

The shares were priced at 59⅞, with advance indications of strong demand from investors.

A T & T's existing shares reached that price by the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, showing a ¼ gain from Tuesday's close.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials was up .55 at 102.30, and S&P's 500-stock composite index added .55 to 92.98.

Lower-priced and "secondary" stocks dominated the advance.

General Motors, the most active NYSE issue, dropped back ½ to 68½ after a 1¾-point advance in the two previous sessions on the company's declaration of a record fourth-quarter dividend.

The Amex market value index jumped 1.23 to 115.08, and the NASDAQ composite index rose .49 to 98.70.

Storm boosts grain futures

Chicago (AP) — A winter-like storm moving into the Midwest generated slight price gains for grain futures Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

But larger early gains were pared when commercial grain users sold futures contracts in the soybean and corn pits to hedge their purchases in the cash market.

Soybean contracts rose an average of three cents, with the current November delivery closing at $5.88½ a bushel.

Administration lobbying brings victory on coal

(c) New York Times

Washington — While energy tax conferees began their debates with arguments about elderly women "in raggedy old coats," the Carter administration scored a major victory on coal conversion Wednesday.

Rare effective administration lobbying was an important factor in the coal conference agreement to accept much stricter House standards on the size of new industrial plants which would be permitted to burn oil.

The House bill had limited that permission to plants with a fuel input rate of less than 100 million British thermal units per hour. The Senate standard was 300 million BTUs.

The administration estimated the energy savings of the House bill at between 390,000 and $430,000 barrels of oil per day, and the Senate's at 225,000 to 245,000.

The Senate took the House version, with an exception for temporary exemptions of up to five years if the plants could then use no more than 25 percent oil as a fuel combined with synthetics from wastes.

Meanwhile, in another House office building, the tax conferees held their first meeting and displayed a significant but inconclusive maneuvering for position.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., warned that the House bill threatened inequities to women in the "raggedy old coats." House conferees replied that Long was trying to set them up to look with equal sympathy on big business.

Globe-girdlers return

Cortez, Colo. (UPI) — Two Colorado pilots completed their round-the-world flight Wednesday, chopping more than a day off the world record for such a flight by a piston-driven airplane.

Jack Rodd and Harold Benham made a low flyover of the waiting crowd at Cortez Airport before setting their Beechcraft Bonanza down at 3:33 p.m. CST, exactly 10 days, 23 hours, 23 minutes after they left the southwestern Colorado town. The previous record for the 36,000-mile flight was 12 days, 3 hours, 29 minutes.

Both pilots appeared fatigued as they emerged from the plane and Benham said he'd "never do it again." Rodd refused to comment.

Cortez Mayor Hal Tanner presented the pilots with keys to the city and declared the day "Harold Benham and Jack Rodd Day." About 300 townspeople were at the airport to greet the pilots.

The men took part in a downtown parade and then were taken to a local motel for a barbecue featuring roast goat and a cake in the shape of their plane.

Lincolnite receives settlement over disputed police incident

McArthur Myles of 245 S. 30th received $3,200 from the city in a settlement over a disputed police incident, according to Assistant City Attorney James Faimon.

Myles had fallen behind last spring on an installment loan on a Cadillac from The Commonwealth Co. and the firm wanted to repossess the car.

A Lincoln police officer picked Myles up at his home and drove him to the loan company's office at 126 N. 11th. Another officer drove Myles and a loan officer back to Myles' home to repossess the car.

Myles has filed suit against the loan company in federal district court. A lawsuit against the Lincoln Police Department had been discussed between Myles' attorneys and the city, Faimon said.

Faimon said the city's insurance company, Western Casualty, had decided such a lawsuit would cost too much to defend and had offered a settlement.

But, Faimon admitted, there was some question about the propriety of the policemen's activity in the incident.

Police officers shouldn't get involved in mortgage foreclosures, Faimon said.

"The officer was carrying out a civil procedure under the guise of being a police officer — or at least that's how it appears," Faimon said, noting that both officers were in uniform and Myles was transported to and from the company in police cars.

Lincoln Police Chief George Hansen has issued a directive against officers becoming involved in such civil proceedings without a direct court order.

Subpoenas requested for detective, records

The counsel for the special legislative committee investigating the Nebraska State Patrol has filed requests for subpoenas of a Lincoln police detective and other police records.

Toney Redman filed Wednesday with the Lancaster County District Court Clerk a subpoena for Detective James Breen. Redman previously had filed a subpoena for the police records of Breen's investigation of an incident at the Nebraska Penal Complex.

The committee had directed Redman to file those subpoenas as part of its probe of patrol criminal and drug investigative procedures.

Breen investigated allegations of homosexual activity and drug smuggling at the penitentiary earlier this year at the request of the Lancaster County Attorney's Office.

County Attorney Ron Lahners had asked the Lincoln police to handle the investigation because of a possible conflict of interest on the part of patrol Capt. Lynn Parks, head of the criminal and drug units.

The patrol usually handles investigations of criminal conduct at the penitentiary.

Lincoln Police Chief George Hansen said he will comply with the subpoenas, but that he wanted the orders before turning over any of his records to the committee.

North Platte utility hike eyed

North Platte (AP) — A 9.6 percent increase in electric rates for all North Platte residents was recommended Wednesday by the Board of Public Works.

The rate hike would be effective Jan. 1.

The increases must be approved by the City Council before its adoption. A spokesman said it would result in an average increase in residential customer bills of $2.04 a month.

The rise was attributed to a wholesale increase by the Nebraska Public Power District.

Man is accused of fondling girl

A 39-year-old Lincoln man was accused Wednesday in Lancaster County Court with molesting a 6-year-old girl.

Burl Baker Jr., 2129 Candlewood Lane, was charged with fondling a minor, a felony. Baker was ordered to post $2,500 bond and return to court Nov. 29.

County Judge Robert Camp set as a condition of the bond that Baker have no contact with the alleged victim or her family.

'Heroine's' story told against backdrop of 'war crimes' museums

Vietnam Revisited

By Richard Dudman
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Editor's note: Richard B. Dudman, Washington Bureau chief of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, is the first American reporter allowed inside Vietnam for an extended stay since the communist victory 2½ years ago. This is the seventh of a series.

Danang, Vietnam — Thirty-year-old Ho Thi Ly is all soldier, with her pressed green uniform, her shiny black boots and the two stars that show she is a lieutenant, senior grade. She is a "heroine" of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

Lieutenant Ly was honored because she organized 37 sabotage attacks in the Danang area against U.S. and South Vietnamese military installations and is credited with killing 112 of the enemy, including 42 Americans.

Her story is worth telling, together with descriptions of the "war crimes" museums that draw big crowds in the major Vietnamese cities, as an indicator of Vietnam's pride, not to say cockiness, over having driven out first the French and then the Americans and achieving independence and reunification after 32 years of revolutionary struggle.

The spirit evident here among Vietnam's leaders, among the cadres and among many ordinary citizens, is a heady sense of victory after an uphill fight against seemingly overwhelming odds.

Lieutenant Ly began her story by saying she had been a revolutionary since the age of 12. She said her revolutionary spirit was awakened by some radical booklets given her by a relative when she had been wondering how to help her parents and neighbors, who worked night and day and still lived in misery while the landlords lolled in luxury.

She organized a young guerrilla movement of a dozen children her age in her village (Hoa Xuan, in Hoa Vang district), 20 miles from Danang.

By the time she was 18, her guerrilla band was killing off local "puppet" officials with homemade weapons such as grenades made out of old condensed milk cans filled with gunpowder from captured bullets, broken glass and spikes clipped from barbed wire. She said they killed so many that most government officials withdrew to Danang, the provincial capital.

She said she was sent into Danang that year to continue her work. She set up a commando unit with weapons caches sometimes 10 or 15 yards from government military posts. She made the rounds pretending to be a vendor of lottery tickets, bread, newspapers and noodles, so she could move freely among the city's poor and organize them.

Her first big attack was set for Aug. 3, 1968 — on a U.S. military hotel at 96 Hoang Dieu St. Two weeks ahead of time, she got a job there as a janitor and water carrier so she could map the floor-plan and develop the attack plan. Military authorities gave her a regular pass to come and go as an approved servant.

"I made two bombs of clockwork, an explosive material, and grenades I begged from government soldiers with the excuse that I wanted to kill fish in the river," she said. "I hid the bombs in my water cans to get them into the hotel. I put one in a drawer under one of the dining tables. The other, set to go off 15 minutes later, I put in one of the automobiles parked on the ground floor.

"Everything went according to the plan. I was on the ground floor when we heard the first bomb go off at 10:05 a.m. It made a terrible crash and wrecked part of the upper floors. Survivors rushed down the stairs and police converged on the building.

"The second bomb caught them as we had intended. Total casualties were 17 killed, including five American officers, 19 injured, four cars completely destroyed and six others damaged."

Lieutenant Ly said she directed 36 similar attacks in the next five months but was caught in an unsuccessful attempt by herself and another woman commando to shoot their way into the Danang radio station on Jan. 2, 1969.

"I was arrested and tortured, but I wouldn't tell them about any of the commandos except my companion, who had escaped," she said.

After six months in a Danang jail, she said she was trasferred to the prison island of Con Son and held there until eventually released in belated compliance with the 1973 Paris agreement.

Nearly 100,000 persons a month, including busloads of foreign tourists, visit a museum of "U.S. War Crimes" in the old U.S. AID building on Danang's main street along the waterfront.

The exhibition relies heavily on American news pictures to portray persons killed, crippled and in one case dragged behind a U.S. tank. It stresses the impact of American policies on ordinary people — death and destruction from the bombing, loss of food supply through defoliation, and uprooting the population through a strategy of driving people into cities and special camps.

The permanent show tends to blame the suffering, death and destruction entirely on the "U.S. imperialists," while tending to excuse the anti-communist Vietnamese as mere puppets of the United States.

A government guide pointed to a photgraph of a South Vietnamese captain said to have eaten the livers and ears of captured communist fighters and said, "He would not have done that by his own nature, but he was urged to do it by the American aggressors."

The museum director called attention to an official U.S. government booklet in Vietnamese hanging on the wall and said it contained U.S. instructions to Vietnamese jailers on how to torture prisoners. The booklet was a translation of a prison administration manual by a scholar at the University of Michigan.

The Army Museum in Hanoi, another showplace for foreign tourists as well as Vietnamese, features a picture of President Lyndon B. Johnson with a group of senators including J. William Fulbright, who later became a leading opponent of the war, announcing the start of routine bombing of North Vietnam.

In the yard is the wreckage of several American warplanes including a B-52 and one of McDonnell Douglas's F-4s, identified as the 3,700th plane shot down, on June 27, 1972. A guide repeated the government's claim that 68 of the high-flying B-52 superbombers were shot down. The U.S. figure is much lower.

"Our people did the same thing your people did in 1776 when they fought against the British aggressors," the guide said.

"We distinguish very carefully between the U.S. aggressors and the progressive forces in the United States. We do not put the American people in the same basket with the U.S. aggressors."

A popular exhibit is a room-sized relief map of Dien Bien Phu and the surrounding mountains with colored lights to show stages in the final battle against the French in 1954 as a recorded voice tells the story.

In the lovely old city of Hue, a group of officials had been describing American atrocities and repeating the often-heard demand that the United States fulfill its "obligation" to "contribute to healing the wounds of war."

After much of this, they were reminded of reported mass executions by the communist side in 1968, while its forces held the Citadel and other parts of the city for a month. The victims included many ordinary Vietnamese citizens and a group of West German physicians and French priests who had helped relieve suffering on both sides during the civil war.

Some Americans consider the incident to have been a Viet Cong My Lai, a reference to the slaughter of unarmed Vietnamese men, women and children the same year by U.S. troops led by Lt. William L. Calley Jr.

The deputy chairman of the people's committee that now governs the province made this comment:

"The enemy often tried to make propaganda to defame us. We don't know whether this incident happened or not. Bad elements sometimes took advantage of a situation. We can't deny that such a thing happened, but if it did it was contrary to the aims of our revolution, which were to liberate Hue and liberate the patriotic Vietnamese people here."

A thoughtful western diplomat who has lived in Hanoi several years contrasts the circumstances of the American and French withdrawals from Vietnam and says it may be more difficult for Americans than it was for Frenchmen to develop normal relations with the country.

"The French withdrew after a military defeat, one that involved heroic sacrifice," he said. "And the Vietnamese made it easy for the French by praising the defenders as good fighters to the end. In Freudian terms, Dien Bien Phu enabled France to escape humiliation."

Next: Vietnam's prospects for the future.

Britain drops ticket plan

London (UPI) — Britain's National Theater is giving up its controversial "voucher" ticket system because too many people took advantage of it.

Under the scheme advance buyers paid 3.30 pounds for a voucher exchanged on the day of performance for a numbered seat, or 4.80 pounds for a specific seat bought in advance.

But the three-theater complex found too many people saving money the voucher way, so beginning Dec. 1 it will adopt the usual system of specific seats scaled at differing prices.

The top price will be 4.70 pounds and the lowest 1 pound. A spokesman said 70 percent of the seats would be 3.60 pounds or less.

UNL Master Coffey stuck to her writing

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

In the late 1950s Marilyn Coffey kept track of stock market ticker tapes and edited Sylvia Porter, thinking to herself "what audacity" — a beginning reporter in Nebraska editing a nationally syndicated column.

Since then the Alma native and University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate has had her own writing published in national magazines and is working on her second novel.

This week she is back in Lincoln combining some research for a series of Nebraska-based essays with a visit to UNL as one of the distinguished alumni for Masters Week '77.

From the copy desk of the Lincoln Journal to the city and police beat at the Hastings' Tribune, Ms. Coffey set out in 1960 with a friend to see the world.

She finally settled in New York City where she worked as a typist, then sometimes secretary and "slush editor" for Good Housekeeping magazine.

As slush editor Ms. Coffey sorted through grocery boxes full of unsolicited manuscripts looking for the few which would someday appear in the magazine.

She married, took time out from journalism to care for a young son, then returned to work in trade journalism — the business publications.

In 1966 when she was editing a handbags and accessory trade magazine, the 1959 journalism graduate decided that "what I really wanted to do was my own writing." And she left the field of journalism.

She spent her last paycheck for a summer at Martha's Vineyard writing a novel. "I threw it in the trash can. It was awful . . . but I learned from it."

She kept on and in 1973 her first novel, "Marcella," was published.

"I usually start with a voice in my head which says something that attracts me," said Ms. Coffey about her novel writing.

She begins already knowing certain givens — a crucial central scene, the beginning or the end. From there the novel grows, each draft working out a different aspect of the book.

And the novels develop slowly — five years for "Marcella," another four on her unfinished second novel, "One for the Money."

She has no need for discipline to write. "I enjoy the process of doing it. I write when I feel like it and I feel like it an awfully lot."

And she senses when the book is finished — "when I get bored with it."

Both novels began the same weekend, about nine years ago. "I wrote rough drafts for both in one weekend in which I did nothing else but type."

After a week of rest she looked at the 40-page drafts and decided to start with "Marcella" — "the ending was already there and I didn't have an ending for 'One for the Money.' "

Her second book is a satirical story about a power struggle between a woman underground filmmaker and her cameraman, according to Ms. Coffey, who has been a feminist since birth.

When the women's movement began, "it seemed long overdue, and I felt very comfortable there," said Ms. Coffey, who for two years held the frustrating job as affirmative action director at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.

Ms. Coffey working on second novel.

Ms. Coffey has strong Nebraska roots. Her father, Tom Coffey, who died last April, served in the Unicameral and was state purchasing agent.

The inaccuracies in the movie "Badlands" led to Ms. Coffeys essay, "Badlands Revisited, a 1974 cover article for the prestigious Atlantic Monthly.

Starting the research for the article, Ms. Coffey discovered that no New York City library carried Nebraska newspapers. She had to turn to the Library of Congress in Washington D. C. and help from UNL English Professor Wilbur Gaffney.

In the essay she combined the factual information with her own memories of the Starkweather-Fugate murder spree, when she was a UNL junior journalism major.

And she dug up an old J-school assignment out of her files — coverage of the first day of the Starkweather trial.

Agent called 'Nick the Greek' runs most successful 'sting' yet

Nashville, Tenn. (UPI) — More than 300 people were tricked into selling $2.3 million in stolen goods to a stocky, balding undercover agent known as "Nick the Greek" in the nation's most successful "sting" operation, police said Wednesday.

Federal agents and police began a roundup of 284 persons named in 686 indictments. Police were trying to identify another 75 who sold goods to undercover agent Charles D. Lowe while hidden microphones and cameras recorded the deals.

Lowe, telling thieves he worked for the Mafia, opened a bogus typewriter repair shop May 5 as a front for his operation and continued to buy until Oct. 12 when the shop was closed. Authorities then began tracing identities and preparing for Wednesday's raid.

Engraved calling cards identifying the shop as C.T. & T. and including a phone number and the motto "we buy and sell" were circulated through prostitutes.

Although the shop's initials stood for Consolidated Telegraph and Typewriter, undercover police secretly referred to it as "Catch Thieves and Thugs."

More than 150 of those named in indictments had been arrested by Wednesday afternoon.

The suspects came from 10 states and included the son of a city councilman, brothers of two police officers and four state prison inmates who allegedly stole while on job assignments from a minimum security prison. Almost 90 percent had past criminal records, officials said.

"Some were a little resentful," said Lowe, a 39-year-old Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent. "Most were very cordial. One of them told me, 'You did a good job. You do your thing and I'll do mine.' A lot of them take that atittude."

Nashville was the 25th city to host a "sting" operation funded by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. Police Chief Joe Casey said the total of arrests was higher than in any of the previous bogus fencing operations.

Ammonia spreads over Pensacola

Pensacola, Fla. (AP) — Toxic ammonia killed one man and sent thousands of people from their homes Wednesday night after spewing from a derailed tank car and spreading through a 10-square-mile area of Pensacola, police said.

As many as 5,000 residents were evacuated.

"There have been at least 15 or 20 injuries," said Eddie Henderson, a dispatcher for Escambia County Emergency Services.

A spokesman at Sacred Heart Hospital said the wife of the dead man, and their 4-year-old daughter and 16-month-old son, were in critical condition with breathing problems.

None of the victims was identified.

Three hospitals in the area admitted at least 12 people. Hospital spokesmen said they had been told to expect more patients.

Officials said a nursing home located in the well-to-do residential area was among the residences evacuated.

Larry Padgett, an Escambia County paramedic, said eight cars on the Louisville & Nashville train derailed and one began leaking anhydrous ammonia, which is used as a fertilizer and refrigerating agent, at "a fairly high volume."

He said winds from the southwest pushed the ammonia gas over Escambia Bay toward neighborhing Santa Rosa County.

In Santa Rosa, a highway patrol spokesman said authorities were considering ordering evacuation of parts of that county.

The train derailed about 7:30 p.m. on Scenic Highway along Escambia Bay about two miles outside the Pensacola city limits, police said.

Blaze hits grain silo near Alvo

Lincoln Star Special

Approximately 50 firefighters from the Eagle, Alvo, Palmyra and Greenwood volunteer departments and the Southeast Rural Fire District were kept busy more than three hours Wednesday night trying to contain a silo fire in rural Alvo.

The fire, at the farm of Charles Ganz on the south edge of the community, apparently was started by internal combustion. The first fire calls were turned in at 8 p.m. and firemen were still on the scene at 11 p.m.

No damage estimate was available, although the grain silo was described as "fairly large, about 40 feet high and 15 to 20 feet in diameter," by Cass County sheriff's Deputy Larry Shelbourn. He added that firefighters encountered some difficulties in fighting the blaze because of the wet fields that surrounded the silo.

Proposed plan unveiled for combating 'redlining'

Washington (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale unveiled proposed regulations Wednesday to combat "redlining," the alleged banking practice denying housing loans to aging inner-city neighborhoods.

Mondale announced the proposed rules of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at a White House news conference, underscoring administration concern about urban problems.

"These regulations will help revitalize our cities, strengthen existing neighborhoods, and remove barriers to home buying and rehabilitation," Mondale told reporters.

However, he added: "We will not encourage unsound mortgage lending practices." The proposed rules would apply to savings and loan associations, which make more than half of all home loans.

The bank board wants to prohibit denial of loans because of the age of a dwelling or neighborhood and require savings and loan associations to make sure they are serving adequately all sections of cities.

The proposals would require savings associations to develop written standards for processing loans to insure against discrimination. They also would bar "undue consideration" of arrest records, job histories and educational backgrounds of loan applicants.

Robert H. McKinney, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, said violators would be subject to government cease-and-desist orders. He said the rules can take effect after a 60-day period for public comment.

Potpourri — an old fashioned word meaning a little bit of everything — and a little bit of everything is what you can sell! Any merchandise (priced under $100), from an old tennis racket to an electric stove, can be advertised in Potpourri for 3 days for just $3 (fifteen word limit). You may cancel your ad when merchandise is sold . . . no refunds will be made, however.

When you have something to sell, put your message where the buyers are.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, November 10, 1977

The most impish persons are apt to be born under Gemini. The strongest are Taurus. The most affectionate are Leo. It is not fair to categorize the signs by one word. However, it is difficult to resist noting that Scorpio is jealous, passionate, creative, competitive and a most gracious winner. If you are seeking a person to help make your wishes come true, seek out an Aquarian. Gregarious Aquarius enjoys seeing your face light up with delight.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on concern with mysteries, the occult, bank balances, security as it affects partner or mate. Curb tendency to be extravagant. Wipe slate clean of debts. Review of obligations is necessary. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. Intuition may be tested. Adhere to facts without being rigid. Utilize common sense, especially where legal affairs enter picture. If married, mate surprises with statements, actions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel news could be featured, along with surprise invitation. Another Gemini and a Sagittarian are featured. Stick to number 13." Unorthodox procedures are necessary to do job.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get plenty of action. Have basic material available. Accent on change, variety, excitement, romance, speculation. Keep ultimate goal in sight. If you've done "homework," expect an advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What seems a permanent roadblock can be lifted—soon. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Accent on home, property, business transaction lately tangled in red tape. Necessary documents are on the way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family commands more-than-usual attention. Visits, telephone messages cause change in plans. Taurus, Leo and Libra are part of your scenario. What had been confusing falls into place. Know when to say "Enough is enough!"

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Definition of words, terms more important than usual. Accent on cost factors, locating missing articles, collecting needed data. Member of opposite sex reassures you through exciting revelation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on relationship that intensifies. You can outline your own destiny, make significant, long-range gains. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. "Investment" pays off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Wish comes true where money is concerned. Surprise comes with fresh start. Be independent. Encourage original thinking. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Stick to number 1."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are in touch with pulse of public. Outline program, needs—those in authority are willing to act on your petition. Another Aquarian, Cancer and Leo could be part of scenario. Trust intuition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Fears, superstitions, self-doubts can be dispelled. Gemini, Sagittarius aid in helping you to see the light. Secrets now can be openly discussed. You'll sleep better, too.

IF NOVEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are intense, passionate, stubborn, dynamic, domineering, original, independent. You are ending a major cycle or relationship. August was memorable. Social life picks up in December—happiness, travel, reunion are featured. New start, optimism and success—these are shown for 1978, with July an outstanding month. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
